Fourth of July Enjoyed Here; Few Casualties

Kingston residents and those of the surrounding villages enjoyed a glorious Fourth of July on Thursday, when various amusements furnished plenty of enjoyment on the day which was very unusual as far as the weather was concerned. There were few casualties and no fatalities in the celebration of Independence Day here.

Traffic was very light for the holiday and the number of automobile accidents were few. The celebration here was very quiet in the opinion of many, who recalled the days of much more noise and destruction.

The sweltering heat that usually marks the day was not felt Thursday. Instead the temperature was very agreeable to picnickers, autoists, and theatregoers, but slightly too chilly for bathers, although those who enjoy regular dips at beaches and lakes hereabouts did so on the Fourth. Kingston Point Beach, DeWitt Lake and Mirror Lake at Golden Rule Inn, Ulster Park, were visited by a goodly number.

After enjoying athletic events in the afternoon, such as baseball, tennis, swimming, or contests held at picnics, many went to the theatres, enjoyed the band concert in the rear of the high school or visited the various dance pavilions at summer resorts in this section.

Golden Rule Inn catered to many with a special dinner and an entertainment that was said to equal presentations of the "Great White Way." The El Dorado Entertainers at the Inn for the summer held sway throughout the evening and put over a delightful program besides furnishing music for dancing. There was also a big fireworks display.

DeWitt Lake held a water sports contest which was witnessed by a record crowd.

International C. E. Backs Up Hoover

Kansas City, July 5 (AP).—The Christian Endeavor went on record in its annual international convention here last night in favor of President Hoover's stand against lawlessness. A resolution adopted by the great gathering of young christians declared "we believe his (Hoover's) leadership in this matter marks a new era in the progress of law observance and enforcement."

"We have noted with deep concern the repeated declarations of President Hoover on the question of lawlessness," the resolution stated. "It threatens the foundation of the republic. This constitutes a challenge which cannot be overlooked. People who break the law are destroying the very fabric of democracy."

The resolution also declared the "18th Amendment constitutes the greatest moral reform in the corporate life of the nation within the present century and it is a notable effort to free people from the "age-long curse of the liquor traffic."

10 Drowned in Lake Michigan

Grand Haven, Mich., July 5 (AP).—The vicious surf and undertow of windswept Lake Michigan took the lives of 10 persons here yesterday, all drowning virtually simultaneously and within a radius of but a few hundred yards.

Nine of the dead were bathers at a municipal park beach; the other was a girl who, with three companions, was swept from a pier at the beach by a giant breaker which bowled the four into water.

While three life guards struggled against the waves to pull the four struggling persons in the water to safety, a terrific undertow apparently generated by the huge combers which first swept the pier, carried the nine bathers to their death. Hundreds of persons ashore, gay holiday picnickers and bathers basking in a warm sun, watched horror stricken as the nine were whirled, screaming for help, far out into the white-capped lake.

Five Passengers' Skulls Fractured

St. Louis, July 5 (AP).—Fifteen persons are known to have been injured this morning when a Burlington passenger train from Kansas City backed into the side of a Frisco accommodation train at the Union Station here. Five of those hurt received fractured skulls.

The wooden coaches, both crowded with St. Louis county residents on their way to work in the city; were pushed off their trucks and overturned when the observation car of the Burlington train smashed into the side of the Frisco local.

Many other passengers were believed to have suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Boy Scouts Spent 4th at Saugerties

Participated in Flag Raising Exercises and Parade in Morning and Held Rally With Athletic Events in Afternoon.

The Boy Scout Rally in Saugerties on July 4 proved a great success. While it looked as though it might rain in the morning and spoil the possibility of putting on the parade and the program, the weather cleared and the schedule of events was carried through as outlined. The Scouts of Kingston were transported to and from Saugerties in busses.

Arriving in Saugerties, the Scouts participated in the flag raising exercises at the High School grounds. After a brief program the parade formed headed by Maisenhelder's Band of Kingston. About 300 Scouts followed. Further down the line, a Scout fife, drum and bugle corps composed of 16 Scouts from the various troops of Kingston rendered excellent martial music and won the applause of the people who lined the streets. Many fine floats by business firms of Saugerties were also in line.

After the parade was over the Scouts were given an excellent dinner, all the milk they could drink and all the ice cream they could eat. They certainly did justice to the refreshments. When they sat down to eat, they were a hungry bunch but when they left the tables they were satisfied and happy.

At 2:30 o'clock, the Scouts marched to the athletic field where the Scout contests took place. Troop 1 of the Y. M. C. A. of Kingston won the loving cup presented by the Chamber of Commerce of Saugerties under whose auspices the rally was held.

After the contests were over, the Scouts were treated with all the soda water they could drink. Then they entered the busses and came home. If the Wilbur avenue dump had not caught fire about 10 o'clock Fourth of July morning, the day would have proved uneventful for the Kingston fire department for no fires caused by fireworks occurred in the city on the holiday. The firemen worked from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night before the fire in the city dump could be extinguished.

Kingston Theatre To Open Monday

After Being Closed for Alterations Wall Street Theatre Opens with "The Show Boat", a Talkie Special —Cost $25,000 to Renovate Theatre.

After being closed for some time to make alterations to the interior, the Kingston Theatre on Wall street will reopen Monday, July 8, as a "talkie" house with "Show Boat" as the opening feature. This picture, which has been one of the biggest talking hits of New York, will remain at the Kingston Theatre for one week.

During the time the Kingston Theatre has been closed the interior has been altered and refitted with new draperies and furnishings and a Western Electric sound system installed so that in future the house will be used for the showing of big feature talking pictures. "Show Boat" has been selected as the opening feature and will be shown at popular prices. The week of July 22, the "Trial of Mary Dugan" will be the week's feature.

The picture "Show Boat" has been one of the biggest hits in the history of talking films. The idea of a playhouse on the water originated over 100 years ago and its popularity grew until Civil War times when the show boat was in its heyday. Around the original show boat of Goeffrey Chapman a novel was written by Edna Ferber and from this novel has been constructed the picture "Show Boat" with many stars of the film world taking part. Included in the list are Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan and others. The story concerns the love affair of the youthful star of a show boat, the Cotton Palace Floating Theatre, and a gay young Mississippi river gambler. Songs, choruses and highlights of Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" have been combined by movietone with the stars of that show taking part.

In order to make the theatre ready for talking pictures engineers from New York city were brought here to study conditions in the theatre and as a result of their work the echo has been entirely eliminated and the talking picture will be given as perfectly as at the Broadway Theatre.

Experienced operators who understand the new system of talking pictures will be in charge of the machine.

It is said that the sum of $25,000 has been expended in making the theatre ready for the showing of talking pictures. The interior of the theatre has been beautified, and those who attend the performances next week kill find that the interior has been entirely changed and that it is now a very beautiful show house.

Flag for Boys at Camp Preumaker

Jr. O. U. A. M. Present Flag to Boys at Y. M. C. A. Camp—Senator Wicks Makes Presentation Speech —Boys Spend Busy Holiday.

Fourth of July at Camp Preumaker, the Y. M. C. A. camp for boys, was a gala day. Reveille sounded early in the morning and the boys awoke, and with a bound and a jump they were on the job. Flag raising, setting-up drill and the morning dip were given their allotted time. Breakfast and chapel followed in quick order. Eager groups of boys quickly policed their camp, made their bunks and soon it was time for swim and dinner.

Then the guests of the day began to arrive. Senator Arthur H. Wicks, members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Band, members of the order and many friends and parents of the boys, members of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A., camp committeemen and others gathered to be present when the Junior Order of United American Mechanics were to present an American flag to the boys of the camp.

A short concert by the band and then the master of ceremonies, Past President Elmer E. Swart, introduced the chaplain of the camp, the Rev. George Woods of Leeds, who offered the invocation. State Senator Wicks was then introduced and in an address which was deeply patriotic, presented to Chester A. Baltz, representing the camp committee, a bautiful American flag as the gift of the Junior Order. Senator Wicks laid upon Mr. Baltz the obligation to see that the boys were instructed in the courtesies due a flag and that the spirit of true Americanism be inculcated in the program in such a way that the boys would learn to love, honor and defend, if necessary, their flag.

As the flag was raised to the mast head of the new 54 foot pole by "Whitey" Stork and by Clarence Rowland, Jr., the band played "The Star Spangled Banner." This was followed by a salute of firecrackers by the campers.

Boys to Cherish Flag.

Camp Committeeman Baltz received the flag and in a few words expressed the appreciation of the committee and the campers for the gift of the Junior Order and pledged that the boys would ever be taught to love, cherish and protect the flag of their country.

Mr. Baltz then invited the guests to inspect the camp and to be sure and register at the camp office. Refreshments were served and the 250 or more guests availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the camp, the new sleeping bungalows, the new wharf and the boats. Arrangements were made so that those who wished to swim might enjoy the water, while the life guards of the camp under the direction of Warren Kiss patrolled the creek in case of accident.

After supper the campers divided themselves into two teams and enjoyed a game of baseball. Then a fishing party was organized to try for several of the big bass that were jumping early in the morning. The results of the catch furnished a splendid fish dinner for the entire camp today.

Bonfire Climaxes Busy Day.

The climax of the day was the big 25-foot bonfire that was built early in the day by the boys. As the flames roared up into the sky, the giant salutes that had been carefully hoarded all day were set off, Roman candles burst into flame, while sparklers were furnished all the campers and added to the beauty of the scene. Then in the quiet of the day came the soft call of taps, and good nights, and the camp was quiet once more.

Camp Preumaker is an activity of the Y. M. C. A. and is conducted for all boys between the ages of 9 and 17 who wish to spend a week or more in the open. The camp is under the direct leadership of Chester R. Hall, who has had a wealth of experience in conducting camp for boys, and who is well known among the boys of Kingston and vicinity.

Arrest Follows Highland Crash

John Duffy of New York was brought to the county jail Thursday and held pending arraignment before Justice of the Peace H. A. Lent at Highland on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. It is alleged that Duffy, driving a Packard car, struck another machine at Highland and injured a five-year-old girl named Thorne. Duffy was instructed to wait until an investigation was made but failed to wait. He started to drive away and a short distance below Highland his car overturned. Duffy escaped injury and abandoned the car and started for home by train. At the Highland station he was apprehended by State Troopers before he had boarded a train. It is also claimed that he had no license with him.

Three Injured on Palenville Road

Two Priests and William Hildebrandt of Leeds Injured Thursday in Old Accident on the Mountain Road—All Three in Benedictine Hospital.

Three men, two of whom are priests, were injured Thursday afternoon in an odd accident on the Palenville mountain road, about six miles from Catskill, and had to be removed to the Benedictine Hospital here where they are under treatment. The two priests are Father John Byrnes of St. Colman's Church at East Kingston, and Father Mensi Turi of St. Joseph's Church at Glasco. The third man injured is William Hildebrandt of Leeds, Greene county.

Father Byrnes sustained a fracture of several ribs, while Father Turi was quite badly injured about the head. Hildebrandt sustained a possible rib fracture and an injury to his hand.

The two priests were riding together while Hildebrandt was riding on a truck which was being towed by another car. As the cars were about to pass the rear wheel on the Hildebrandt truck came off, and the truck swerved in front of the other car and both truck and car came together. Hildebrandt was hurled out of the truck by the force of the impact while the two priests were thrown heavily against the dash in their car. The car in which the priests were riding was badly wrecked, and the truck was also damaged.

Renew Search for Mountain Climber

Paradise Inn, Rainier National Park, Wash., July 5 (AP).—Unsuccessful in their first search for the body of Forrest Greathouse of Seattle, who presumably perished last Tuesday when he and five other mountain climbers fell into a hidden crevasse near the top of Mount Rainier, mountain guides renewed their hunt today.

The search for Greathouse involved a perilous trek across Ingraham glacier's icy crust, which conceals many deep crevasses. The crumbling ice was the cause of Tuesday's tragedy. The mountain climbers, all tied to a rope, plunged down a steep incline of ice when one of their party made a false step, fell and dragged the others down.

The body of Edwin Wetzel, Milwaukee attorney, was recovered late Wednesday after Robert Strobel, one of the six, had made his way out of the crevasse and down to Camp Muir, sending rescuers after the others.

Of the four men who escaped death after being swallowed up in the crevasse, three were uninjured. L. H. Brigham, official guide of the mountain climbers, last night expressed the belief Greathouse's body never would be found.

Government Whiskey Stolen

Medicinal Liquor in Chicago Concentration Depot Removed from Barrels and Spurious Whiskey Substituted—Valued at More Than $2,000,000.

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Immediate action to condemn 482 barrels and 1,955 cases of spurious bonded medicinal liquor will be started by the Federal government, it was announced yesterday by officials.

The liquor recently was discovered substituted for bona fide whiskey stored here in the Sibley warehouse, the government concentration depot for the middle west.

How the liquor, kept under close guard by Federal agents and gaugers on the sixth and seventh floors of the building, was stolen and the spurious whiskey put in its place has not been revealed.

Local prohibition authorities said colored water, mixtures of water and alcohol, and raw alcohol had been used as substitutes for the whiskey. The thefts were discovered as early as last August, one official said, and an extensive investigation has been carried on since. W. H. Kennedy, deputy prohibition administrator, said "perhaps 25 or 30 persons have been under investigation and there will probably be 50 or more witnesses taken before the grand jury."

Officials said that probably 30,000 gallons of good whiskey 10 and 12 years old had been taken from the warehouse and put on the market. At bootleg prices it was valued at more than $2,000,000.

Fourth of July Death List in America 159

Reduction of 16 Per Cent Last Year Attributed to Decrease in Number of Deaths from Drowning and from Heat—Auto Fatalities Increased From 54 to 70.

[illegible] yesterday.

[illegible] this year [illegible] last year [illegible] from heat [illegible] 54 to 70.

Fireworks [illegible] to play a smaller part in the nation's Independence Day death toll. Only seven fatalities from this cause were reported this year as compared with 11 in 1928, and four of these resulted from a fireworks factory explosion and fire July 3.

Drownings with 71 deaths were responsible for the largest loss of life, as they were last year; but even so, there were 35 less deaths from this cause than a year ago.

70 Die In Auto Accidents.

Automobile fatalities, on the other hand, bounded upward from 54 last year to 70.

Nearly one-third of the country's total toll was taken by the middle west. The middle Atlantic states, which last year led the country in deaths with 68, had 30 less yesterday, although more than half the deaths from fireworks in the country occurred in that section. The northwest and the mountain states had the smallest death lists, each section reporting three.

Temperatures generally were lower throughout the country yesterday than was the case July 4, 1928, when 12 deaths resulted from heat alone. So far as reports to the Associated Press showed, there was only one death yesterday from heat, and that was in Chicago.

Two Deaths From Airplane Mishaps.

Last year airplane accidents took four lives, whereas yesterday but two deaths occurred from this cause. A year ago, too, there were three deaths in automobile races. The only death from that cause reported this year was at Pompano, Fla., where a driver was killed after he had crossed the finish line in third place of a 10-mile dirt track race.

Stricter laws regulating the sale and use of fireworks was credited with keeping the number of deaths and injuries from this cause down.

In Michigan, particularly, enforcement of a new state fireworks law was reported as most effective.

In New York, 500 children were treated at city hospitals for fireworks injuries.

Contrasting with the 1928 heat was a 10-minute snowstorm yesterday at Speculator, N. Y., the snow falling so fast that holiday motorists, blinded, stopped their cars to avoid collisions. It was the coldest July 4 the Adirondacks country has experienced in years, the temperature being down to 50 degrees.

Jolt For French Government

Paris, July 5 (AP).—The government's viewpoint on the question of ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt accord received another jolt today when the foreign affairs committee of the chamber decided that reservations should be incorporated in the text of the ratification bill.

These reservations were the old ones, providing that France will not pay America if Germany defaults on the reparations payments to France.

M. Poincare's adherents saw in the entire play nothing more than a desire to use every pretext to overthrow the "Armistice Day Cabinet," force the premier into retirement or at best compel a leftist ministry.

This opposition today mustered considerable strength, however, because all of France wants the safeguard clause included in the ratification and it has become increasingly difficult for deputies who have intended voting against it.

Uncle Sam's New Distillery

Waterloo, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—The United States government now owns a completely equipped distillery, with large stores of pure grain alcohol.

On July 1, the plant, equipment and stored product of the Waterloo Distilling Corporation, with an estimated value of more than $1,500,000, were officially taken over by United States Marshall Joseph Fritsch, Jr. Four prohibition enforcement officers who had been stationed at the distillery for some time were recalled by Andrew McCampbell, in charge of prohibition enforcement in the Buffalo district.

The confiscation of the property was the climax of a spectacular raid and a legal battle which lasted almost two years. On June 22, 1927, a squad of prohibition agents from Washington raided the distillery.

Followed a long series of court actions during which Richard H. Templeton, United States district attorney, asserted that more than 208,000 gallons of pure grain alcohol, valued at more than $1,000,000 had been diverted into illegal channels.

Indictments were returned against seven individuals and five corporations. Five men were convicted, the two acquitted being prohibition agents stationed by the government at the distillery during its operation under permit, their duties being to supervise the manufacture and sale of the finished product.

Those convicted, each of whom was sentenced to 18 months in Atlanta, were Charles P. Fitzgerhood, president of the Waterloo Distillery; Ludwig Bauer, distillery manager; Joseph Beck, president of the Solvents and Chemical Corporation of Syracuse; Rudolph Beck, a salesman for the same company, and Armad Lagier, president of the Inter Forwarding Company of New York city. The five corporations indicted paid fines totaling $22,000.

The property now in the hands of the government includes an industrial plant, denaturing plant, bonded warehouse, 25 acres of land and more than 4,000 drums of pure grain alcohol.

The boys were drenched while pitching their tents as a heavy thunder storm overtook them. The Rev. Edwin D. Miner, pastor of the Reformed Church, is their Scoutmaster. Monday afternoon about 3 o'clock one of DuBois's busses operating between New Paltz and the river struck a Chevroleet coupe coming down the river hill, spinning it completely around in the road. It happened at the narrow bridge in front of the Rathgeb knitting mill. No one was injured but the coupe was badly damaged and was towed to Lorensen's garage by the wrecker. This is the second accident of this kind within a short time. There is barely room for a bus and car to pass on the bridge and the drivers misjudge the distance.

Childish Progress

Starting at infancy, a child's community is his mother. After the age of two, other children form his community. At six the real imaginative age of a child is shaped. From then on the child needs guidance at his games at all times. As the child grows to the teen age he forms companions and makes his community. The father has as great a responsibility in making a fine community for the child as the mother has.—Dr. Joseph Lee.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 5, 1929.

THE SIX-STATE COMPACT.

The Boulder Dam act is now in force by proclamation of the President. The matter concerns only seven states which desire the water rights of the Colorado River equitably distributed, but the Federal government is involved through the vote of Congress to contribute $25,000,000 for flood control toward the construction of the Boulder dam, which is expected to cost about $155,000,000. The amount above the Federal government's flat contribution for flood control is to be recouped during a period of fifty years from sale of hydro-electric power and water for irrigation and other uses. Congress provided that the Boulder Dam Act should become effective when six of the seven states concerned had ratified the Colorado River compact. Arizona has not yet done so, but California, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada, Colorado and Wyoming have given their approval to the interstate treaty, and thus it goes into effect.

In his proclamation President Hoover speaks of the ratification of the compact by six of the seven states concerned as "the most important action ever taken in that fashion under the Constitution" and says that it "opens the avenue for some hope of the settlement of other regional questions as between the states rather than the imposition of these problems on the Federal government." Obviously he is right in favoring such settlements between the states concerned whenever agreement is possible without appeal to the over-burdened central power. A previous but less far-reaching settlement of this sort was that of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania in regard to water rights in the Delaware River. Both these independent agreements between American commonwealths apart from the Federal power have tended to add strength to the weakened principle of state rights.

FOR OCEAN FLYING.

The great fear of the over-sea flyer in an ordinary airplane is that he will be forced down and not be able to keep afloat long enough for rescue by a passing ship. The experience of Major Franco and his Spanish associates is instructive in its suggestion as the means of meeting this danger. They employed a seaplane and when forced down it floated for a week, part of the time in heavy wind and sea, until the British airplane carrier Eagle finally came to the rescue. The floating capacity and strength of Franco's Dornier Wal seaplane which was thus demonstrated has made his frustrated attempt to fly the Atlantic westward a service to aviation instead of a complete failure.

The incident presents a strong argument in favor of employing seaplanes instead of land planes in overseas flying, even at the possible cost of less speed. The experience of Franco is not likely to be lost on fliers disposed to use land planes in crossing the Atlantic and to depend on rubber boats in case of a fall into the sea. It is said that Lindbergh knew he was taking heavy odds when he started on his famed flight to Paris in a land plane. The problem of reasonably safe overseas air travel would seem to be brought nearest solution by the employment of seaplanes capable of flight yet stout enough to withstand heavy weather for days when forced down upon the waves.

AIR ECONOMY.

Just as we've nearly all capitulated to the modern doctrine that bedroom windows must be open, along comes the United States Public Health Service and lays a restraining hand on the fresh air fiends. Of course fresh air is good, say Uncle Sam's doctors, but don't be foolish about it. Sometimes, especially in cities, the air inside is better than outside. In that case, why open a window to let bad air in? And in winter, a little bit of open window will go a long way. Often the mere crack between the window sashes, if they're not weather-stripped, will suffice.

An ordinary adult requires one-third of a cubic foot of air a minute. A closed window in cold weather may give him 140 times as much air as he needs to keep him alive. Health experts go considerably farther than this, insisting on enough fresh air to keep the air of the room in circulation and making it impossible for the occupant not to breathe fresh air. This calls for 30 or 35 cubic feet a minute per person. Two or three times that much may be coming in around a closed window in January.

We seem to be coming into an age of all-around economy, as regards basic physical requirements. We demand less food, less sleep, less clothing, less room, and now we're to use less air. Which may be all right, if we're preparing for that overpopulation of the world that the Malthusians have been threatening us with so long.

A London staff writer for the Manchester Guardian confesses the "fearful" suspicion that "it may finally turn out that the British Embassy in Washington is the only really dry spot in America." Perhaps he had read the following contribution of a Philadelphia correspondent to the American periodical Plain Talk: "Philadelphia is proud, pious and pusillanimous. It has a thousand churches, and its saloons and speakeasies number thirteen hundred. It is the cradle of American liberty and the home of the most corrupt political machine in the country."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

VITAMINS IN FOOD.

Although research men are not able to tell us exactly of what vitamins are composed, they can tell us with plenty of proof that if these vitamins are not in the food we eat that serious consequences will surely follow.

Fortunately such a very small quantity of these vitamins is necessary for the proper balancing of the diet that the average individual, no matter how poor, can get all he needs in his usual everyday food.

He needs vitamin A for the ordinary development and growth of the body and because it helps to ward off infection. He can get all he needs of this daily in a glass of milk or a little butter or an egg, or green leaves, or cod liver oil, or any cereal like wheat, corn, rice or oats.

For vitamin B, which is necessary for proper health of nervous system, and to promote appetite, he can eat any one of the following: Yeast, spinach, lettuce, celery, asparagus, beans, peas, eggs.

For vitamin C, which protects the body against scurvy, he can get by eating tomatoes, oranges, lemons, spinach, onions, milk.

Vitamin D, which builds the necessary lime into the system, he can get from cod liver oil. This of course is needed more by children than by adults. But wherever there has been illness, and therefore loss of lime from the system, cod liver oil is the ideal food.

You can thus readily see that there is really nothing to worry about in this vitamin business, for practically all of us get some of these foods daily.

Perhaps a little more of the raw foods, fruits, and vegetables would improve our diet somewhat.

Where one has an easy job, not much exercise or walking, it is well not to eat too much of the foods that leave an acid ash for the kidneys to remove, that is bread, meat, eggs, fish, corn, oatmeal and rice, but eat more of the foods with an alkaline ash, namely milk, fruits and vegetables.

With this little thought about vitamins and acid and alkaline foods, there is really nothing that should give you much concern about your diet.

For the Love of a Lady

by Jeffery Farnol

SYNOPSIS: Helen D'Arcy once would her freedom for Sir Richard Guyford, but one look at him of the romance that was to enter their lives. Neither does she know two of her oldest suitors—Viscount Brocklehurst and Captain Despard—are plotting with Richard's cousin, Julian, to ruin her fortune by forcing her into marriage. Julian has challenged Richard to a duel, having been viciously whipped by his enemy for some particularly low villainy. A chance meeting—a delightful breakfast in a sequestered nook—and the romance of Helen, the beautiful, and Richard, the dashing nobleman, starts on its stormy course.

Chapter 10

A WISE DUCHESS

FOR a moment none moved or spoke; then Captain Despard laughed softly.

"And now, my lady, if you are ready?" the captain suggested.

Helen stood awhile as if lost in thought, then, turning suddenly, gave Sir Richard her hand; said she:

"The Duchess, sir, bade me say she expects you at the Moat House, and will be happy to welcome you whenever you will, and indeed—so shall I!" Then she made him a stately curtsey, stooped to kiss little Shuri, and was gone, with Captain Despard attendant.

An ominous prophecy of love and death—a pledge of Romany friendship.

"Master," said old Truffeni, "you as stands up for the 'poor folk'—when us meets again, mebbe the 'poor folk' stands up for you—ay, ay, for death shall be all about ye; ah, and I sees troubles creeping on ye, wi' dangers a-many, but love shall come also, and by it shall ye live, for love is strongest of all."

"Love?" he repeated.

"Verily, young master, grieve not and mind ye—the Hand o' Glory."

At this, he glanced heavenward, but saw the radiant cloud was vanished quite away. He stood awhile lost in wondering speculation; when he looked around, it was to find himself alone.

* * * * *

"Days ago," said my lady, frowning up through the branches of the cherry-tree, "I gave the man your message. And the man comes not. Well, confound the man!"

"Fie, Helen!" murmured Angela. "Remember how wickedly we have misjudged the unfortunate gentleman, how cruelly we have wounded his sensibilities."

"Say, rather, his detestable pride!" cried my lady.

"And shure," quoth the Duchess, "pride is always so very detistable—in other folk!"

"And alas," sighed Angela, shaking her pretty head, "oh me, the poor gentleman so soon to die!"

"Die, child—to, die? Is it Sir Richard Guyfford you mean?"

"Indeed, Helen! They say he is certainly doomed."

"But—two gentlemen may surely fight without killing each other."

"Ay, ay!" nodded the Duchess. "Thrue enough, me dear, some gentlemen may but these won't; shure here will be murderous business, and nothing but dith itself shall prevent 'em killing each other."

"Nay," sighed Angela. "If either kill t' other, 'tis poor Sir Richard must die."

"Heavens above!" exclaimed my lady. "And why must you be so sure, little fool?"

"Nay—why, Helen, oh, my dear, why so angry with poor me?" cried Angela, amazed at Helen's sudden gust of passion.

"Because, miss, if anyone be killed 'twill be all your doing!"

"Mine? Oh, Helen! Oh, my dearest!" wailed Angela. "How—how am I to blame?"

"For writing your three times accursed letters, for mixing up your villains," cried Helen, between snapping white teeth. Whereat Angela bowed meek, pretty head and wept softly.

So Helen, leaning back in her chair, frowned up through the shady branches of the cherry-tree again, Angela wept, and the Duchess, danger, and thumb suddenly arrested in her snuffbox, watched Helen's abstracted face with a singular interest; thus was silence awhile save for Angela's weeping.

"Ah, kind heaven aid me!" she moaned at last.

"And him!" exclaimed Helen. "And him!"

"Who?" demanded the Duchess, sharply.

"Whoever lies in most danger," answered Helen.

"Ha!" exclaimed the Duchess. "Angela, me dear choild, don't snivel; 'twill make your pretty little nose like a strawberry."

"Oh, I know—I know!" wailed Angela, "and Mr. Trumpington expected! But how may I help my tears and Helen so cruel? And how was I to know Sir Richard was not Mr. Julian—I mean that Sir Julian was—Oh, my poor heart is breaking, I vow!"

My lady Helen uttered a sniff; whereupon Angela bridled and turning upon Helen like a defiant dove, ensued the following:

Angela: Oh, how should I know you was so vastly interested in the man?

Helen: (Languidly) What man, pray?

Angela: In love with him!!

Helen (Disdainfully) In love—I? Who with, miss?

Angela: (Desperately) Why — Sir Richard Guyfford! Oh, you may flash your eyes at me—but you're blushing, you know you are! For I know, ma'm, I know! Han't you been riding every day in your newest French habit a purpose to meet him? Han't you been breakfasting with him—alone in arbours? And gypsies telling your fortunes? Oh, I know! Captain Despard told me, so don't deny it, ma'm, don't dare deny it!

Helen: (Sternly) Hold your tongue, miss, and weep! Weep till your eyes are like gooseberries and your nose like a carrot. Be perfectly assured that I despise you for an odious rattle!

Duchess: (Closing snuffbox with snap) Gemini! And that proves it!

Helen: (Looking down her shapely nose, beneath disdainful-drooping lashes) Proves what, I'll beg leave to know?

Duchess: Yourself knows 'tis phwat you're known and I've guessed this week past—'tis in love y' are!

Helen: (Superbly contemptuous) Madam, 'tis odious suggestion!

Duchess: 'Tis love him ye do an' himself no better a poverty-struck squire!

Helen: (Recoiling gracefully) Now, madam, you shock me! Suffer me to retire, for I protest to heaven you——

Duchess: Your fine airs an' graces are wasted on me that dandled ye on this knee—a squalling brat.

Helen: (In hushed voice) Horrors! Oh, most revolting! (She shudders, covers her face and, magnificent in defeat, turns and sweeps from them, across the lawn and so, majestically into the house.)

Then the Duchess laughed till she choked, and chuckled until her whole person, and great elbow chair, shook with suppressed merriment, and Angela checked her weeping to stare.

"'Tis small, clever soul y' are!" quoth the Duchess, at last— "Come, let me kiss thee."

"But oh, dear ma'm, my Helen surely hates me!"

"Av course she does, for the moment, but 'twill pass; Helen's furies never last. But, b' the sweet saints, if she be not in love she'll be thinking o' love, and, thinking on 't, she'll be head over ears in love afore she knows it. But phwat made ye guess 'twas Sir Richard, my honey?"

"Oh, ma'm, I—didn't! I thought, in my heart, 'twas Captain Des——"

Helen, too proud to admit that she loves Richard, makes a surprising move in tomorrow's chapter.

PASTOR WON'T TAKE INCREASE IN SALARY

Dallas, Tex., (AP).—A monument to a minister who won't accept increase in salary is the largest orthodox Baptist Church in the south, whose edifice attracts more than 6,300 active members to worship almost in the heart of Dallas' business district.

The Rev. George W. Truett employs none of the usual methods to draw crowds. He does not announce sermon topics in advance. Neither does he use theatrical means to fill his church.

Yet it has grown 900 per cent in 32 years under his policy of catering to the intelligence of his audience rather than its emotions.

Three blocks from "movie row" in Dallas, the city's First Baptist Church occupies a full block of ground. Its Sunday school, with an enrollment of 6,700, including a cradle roll of 1,400, is housed in a $750,000 seven-story building.

Scarcely 700 belonged to this church when Dr. Truett became its pastor in 1897. Last year its income was $227,765, and this year's budget calls for expenditures of $248,100, of which $66,000 will go to actual church maintenance, $100,000 to the Southern Baptists and $82,000 to a building fund.

For years the church deacons attempted to raise Dr. Truett's salary. When they offered the 62-year-old pastor an increase—he was getting $8,000 a year—he refused.

Over his protest they voted $2,000 a year for the upkeep of his $30,000 home, his car and library.

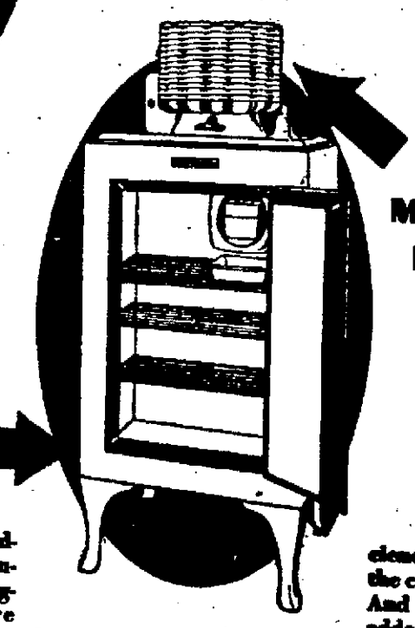
2 OUTSTANDING ADVANTAGES



ALL THE MECHANISM IS ON TOP

THE CABINET IS ALL-STEEL

Of the many advantages of General Electric Refrigerators, two are especially vital—the hermetically sealed, on-top mechanism and the all-steel warp-proof cabinet.

The mechanism in any electric refrigerator has but one purpose—to absorb heat from the food. It must be permitted to radiate that heat rapidly just as heat is conducted away from the engine of your car. As heat naturally rises, it can be radiated from the top of the refrigerator. To place the radiating coils anywhere else cuts down their efficiency and increases the cost of operation. And now has been added the new all-steel cabinet. Built like a safe, it can't warp—it operates on the least amount of current—its doors always retain their perfect fit which shuts out heat. Available in six sizes at prices surprisingly low. The small family size is but $215, at the factory. Sold on convenient time payments.

Listen in on the General Electric Hour, broadcast every Saturday evening, 8 to 9, Eastern Standard Time, over the N. B. C. network of 42 stations.

SUTTER'S HEIRS ASK 50 MILLION

Wrecking of Empire Where Gold Was Struck in California Recalled.

Washington.—"He who finds gold will die in the almshouse."

So runs an old Spanish proverb. The race has been ever prolific in his ironic observations of the way easy wealth has of destroying a man by gratifying his virtues and stimulating his every pride and extravagance. But there is a story also of how a discoverer of gold met misfortune, not from the psychological and moral forces from within, but from forces outside his control.

Such is the story of Gen. John A. Sutter, builder and proprietor of Sutter's fort, of California gold rush fame—a man of affluence and high position in California before the epic discovery of gold in 1848. Paradoxically enough, it was this discovery which ruined him. It brought to his door the horde of maddened fortune hunters, the rabble which ate his substance, which stole his cattle, which trampled his vineyards, which confiscated his lands. He died in penury in a little Pennsylvania town, where he now lies in an obscure grave.

Presses $50,000,000 Claim.

An echo of this ironic tragedy has been brought to the ears of the nation through the recent legal action taken by Reginald Sutter, grandson of the great pioneer, who, as announced in recent news dispatches, is pressing a claim against the United States government for $50,000,000, asserting this sum was due to him and the other heirs because of an agreement made by congress in 1879.

Bits of reminiscence that have been handed down from old residents of California and of Kansas City, where he lived for a time, afford an insight into the personality of the picturesque wanderer, who, born in Germany of Swiss parents and schooled in the army of France, sought the American frontier and founded a principality in the West. Prominent Kansas City residents of a quarter of a century ago recalled the stories which, as boys, they heard the dashing army captain from across the sea tell them in his little merchandise store at Westport avenue and Main street. His store, where wagon trains outfitted for the Santa Fe trail, prospered, but the call of the frontier could not be resisted. In 1838 he joined a trapping party and made his way westward.

Arriving at Monterey, then the capital of California, he was warmly welcomed in 1838 by Gov. Juan Alvaredo, who made him a general and presented him with eleven square leagues of land, to be taken from any section of the domain he might choose. He set out from Monterey, explored the San Francisco, San Publa and Suisan Bays; cruised down the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers and finally reached the present site of Sacramento, where a permanent settlement was made.

Dwelt in Feudal State.

There he built the fort which he named New Helvetia, popularly known in history as Sutter's fort. He was made governor of the northern frontier by the Mexican government and became wealthy. There he dwelt in feudal state, winning the surrounding Indians to his employ. With their aid he built his fort, cultivated large areas of wheat, set out vineyards and raised herds of cattle and horses.

Establishing stores, he traded from Canada to Mexico and as far east as St. Louis. Governor Micheltorena, successor to Alvaredo, gave him an additional eleven square leagues of land to encourage his activities in agriculture. The virtual owner of a quarter million acres of land, he was monarch of all he surveyed.

Then happened the event which reduced him from affluence to penury—the discovery of gold on his own land. James W. Marshall, his foreman, made the find. The date was January 24, 1848. He told his employer, and they kept it a secret until the following March 15, when a weekly newspaper of San Francisco, then a town of 700 population, published the story.

Sam Brennan, of San Francisco, went out to investigate. He returned with a bottle of gold dust. That news depopulated San Francisco. Crews deserted their ships in the harbor. The rush was on. Sutter's fort was overrun, his crops were destroyed and his Indians were either killed or driven away.

Possessing none of the gold miner's instinct, the sturdy pioneer was forced before the year was ended to retreat before the roaring tide of humanity that surged about him. He sold his fort, with all it contained, to the traders, gamblers, rum sellers and boarding house keepers who already had seized upon it. With the dreams of a lifetime dispelled, he retired to the quiet of a little farm on the Feather river.

Fort Wrecked in a Year.

When Bayard Taylor visited the place in 1849 every building in the once well regulated fort was occupied as a hotel, a rum shop, a gambling saloon or a store. Great holes had been broken through the outer walls to serve as doors and windows; the massive gates had been wrenched from their hinges and cut up for firewood; the broad wheat fields and vineyards of a year before were covered with a rank growth of weeds.

The inclosure was filled with a mob of miners. Outside, scores of tents were pitched beside scores of loaded wagons. In the evening campfires cast their glow over piles of miscellaneous merchandise, personal effects and groups of tethered animals.

Before the year ended another great change had come over General Sutter's frontier domain. Trade had left it for the more convenient locality of the river landing and was already building the city of Sacramento. The entire structure was being demolished for its building material. In later years the city of Sacramento spread to and beyond it, and streets were laid out across its site. In more recent years it has been restored to its original form as a memorial to General Sutter and the history in which he figured so vitally.

Squatters settled on the outlying lands. California was being annexed to the United States, and the rights and titles by Spanish governors were not respected. The old pioneer appealed to the United States courts in vain for recompense. California did, however, grant a pension of $250 a month to him, but he relinquished it after fourteen years. In 1872 he sent his two daughters to Bethlehem, Pa., to attend the Moravian school, and, visiting that section later, remained in Lititz. There today, in the little Moravian cemetery, is his grave, beside that of his wife, Anna.

In the recent review of the legal aspects of Sutter's claim against the government, it is recalled that in 1851 Sutter filed suit against 21,000 squatters. The courts upheld him. The squatters appealed and kept the issue in litigation for years.

After Sutter's death in 1870 the legal action languished. Attorneys for Reginald Sutter and other heirs are in Washington, going through the congressional records in search of documents to back up the claims of the heirs.

Archeologists Are Puzzled by Carving

Springfield, Mo.—Finding of a bear's head carved from sandstone near Warsaw, Mo., has attracted attention of archeologists.

The crude yet very plain figure may be more than a thousand years old, and might have been worshiped as some sort of idol by prehistoric races which roamed America 500 years before the landing of Columbus.

The mysterious stone figure, plowed up on an Ozark farm, where apparently it had been buried for countless years, now rests in the museum of Drury college here. The figure is two feet square.

Experts in archeology and geology so far have offered little more than guesses as to its origin.

Dr. Edward M. Shepard and Prof. D. S. Libbery of the Drury geology faculty are studying the model to determine whether or not it was fashioned by a white man, American Indian, or primitive races of dimmer ages.

"It resembles very strongly some of the Aztec and Mexican effigies I have seen in Mexico and Central America," Doctor Shepard said. Both, however, declined to call it an authentic carving by prehistoric people pending further examination.

Old Bed as Tombstone Survives 189 Years

Charleston, S. C.—Still intact after serving 189 years as a tombstone in St. Michael's cemetery here, a four-poster headboard of an old wooden bed has been uncovered by a cleanup crew working in the cemetery. The unusual marker was part of the bed used by Mrs. Mary Ann Luyten during her lifetime.

The words on the marker were plainly visible when workmen removed leaves and moss which had partially covered it. They read, "Mary Ann Luyten, Wife of William Luyten, Died September 9, 1770, in the 27th Year of Her Age."

Air Official Commutes 408 Miles Each day

St. Louis.—Sam B. Lambert, vice president of the Lambert Aircraft Engine company, one of the subsidiaries of the newly organized Allied Aviation Industries, may lay claim to the title of the world's champion commuter.

Every morning and evening Lambert commutes by airplane between his home in St. Louis and Moline, Ill., a distance of 204 miles by air, or about 314 by automobile. At 6:30 each morning he hops off from Lambert-St. Louis field, arriving at his plant in Moline two hours later.

Church Made Famous by Dickens Crumbling

London.—The church of St. George the Martyr, immortalized in "Little Nell" by Dickens as "Little Dorrit's Church," is in danger of crumbling. All London knows St. George as "Little Dorrit."

Ominous cracks many feet long have appeared in the walls and crypt. These are gradually widening until now the whole structure has been placed in danger.

The authorities have threatened to condemn the building unless prompt action is taken to make it safe. The rector of the church has started a drive for $25,000 for repairs to save it.

Taxiing Around The Airports

With ship-to-shore airplane service impending, officials of the Boston airport have petitioned the treasury department at Washington to designate the port as an airport of entry for the examination of incoming passengers and cargo. It is understood the ship-to-shore service is to be started soon with Boston as the land operating base.

Increasing international airplane travel has led to the naming of four more airports of entry. The Buffalo, N. Y., municipal airport has been given such permanent designation and temporary designation has been given the Brownsville, Tex., municipal airport, the Akron, O., municipal airport and the Nogales, Ariz., international airport.

Several sites for development of a municipal airport at Charleston, W. Va., are being surveyed to select the most suitable. Work is expected to be started as soon as the site is chosen.

The Kiwanis Club of Frostburg, Md., is sponsoring the establishment of an airport there. A department of commerce expert will aid in the selection.

The Twin State airport at White River Junction, Vt., is to be dedicated July 5, 6 and 7. The airport is on the old fairgrounds.

The coast and geodetic survey, the mapping agency for the department of commerce, soon is to release a strip map covering the lighted air mail route between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City.

Beaumont, Tex., is to spend $100,000 on a new municipal airport. The present port there is considered too small.

Eight vacation camps for farm women are to be conducted in Vermont this year.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Most Attractive Morning Frock.

6523. Cotton foulard is here pictured with facings of sateen. Dimity with organdy or voile, printed lawn and organdy, tub silk and broadcloth, these are all good combinations. An insert of plaits lengthens the centre panel. Side sections are lengthened over the shoulders to form short sleeves. The V neck is outlined by a rolled collar. Serviceable pockets are added on the side sections.

The pattern for this attractive style is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. To make a medium size will require 3¼ yards of material 35 inches wide or wider. For facing on collar and pockets of contrasting material ⅛ yard 35 inches wide is required, cut crosswise. To finish with bias binding at the centre front seams and at sleeve edge will require 2⅞ yards 1½ inch wide. The width of the dress at the lower edge with plait fulness extended is 1¾ yard.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Fashion Book Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps to The Freeman for our up-to-date Spring and Summer 1929 Book of Fashions showing color plates, and containing 500 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Feeders on Insects

The yellow warbler, American redstart and nighthawk partake of food which is practically 100 per cent insects; barn swallows, little less than 100 per cent; Baltimore orioles, 80 per cent; bluebirds, 78 per cent, and meadow larks, 75 per cent.

Scarlet on the Bench

Scarlet was the "judicial color" throughout the Middle ages, and those dignitaries of the church who were entitled to sit as judges in England during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries wore robes of that hue.

News from the World on Wheels

With exports of American automobiles increasing at a rate which promises to keep this leading industry forging ahead to new and greater records, it is interesting to note that this development has required the same length of time that was required to bring about the present almost universal use of the automobile in this country. More than 30 years ago when the automobile was struggling against strong opposition in this country, these early American cars were being exported to Europe, Asia and Africa. The difference has been that economic conditions enabled the automobile to forge rapidly ahead when once it obtained a foothold here, while it is only in recent years that a substantial increase has been registered in countries of the Old World. Oldsmobiles were among the first cars to be exported overseas and were among the first automobiles to enter India. It was in 1898 that a shipment of three Oldsmobiles was received at Bombay and formed the vanguard of the approximately 125,000 automobiles now registered in that country. These Oldsmobiles were purchased by Rustom Cama, solicitor of Bombay and a descendant of the Oriental scholar of the same name, Jamsetji Tata, industrialist of India, and Kavasji Wadia, who subsequently became the Oldsmobile dealer in Bombay.

Duesenberg, Inc., a unit of Auburn, has set a new record for production of cars above the $10,000 class. Ten to 50 cars is looked on as a high production figure for a year's production in automobiles of this price but Duesenberg is turning out an average of one and a quarter cars daily at its Indianapolis factory while orders are coming in at the rate of two and half cars daily. Sufficient orders are on hand to keep the factory working at capacity for the remainder of the year.

Chrysler Corporation officials report that shipments of Chrysler-built cars and trucks and commercial vehicles for May of this year amounted to 54,595 units, an increase of 14,991 units over shipments for May, 1928, when 39,604 units were shipped, including Dodge Brothers units. These shipments to domestic, Canadian and export markets were of Plymouth, Chrysler "65"s, "75"s, Imperials, De Soto Sixes, Fargo trucks and commercial cars, New Dodge Brothers Sixes, Seniors and Dodge trucks, buses and commerical cars.

With the greatest half year in the history of the company almost ended, Goodrich approaches the second half of the year with unabated industry. Every factory in the world-wide organization of eight manufacturing institutions is working at capacity. At Akron the huge plant is working three eight-hour shifts with a capacity complement for each shift. Goodrich production averages about 50,000 tires a day.

COMPARE it to any car in its field, and you'll find the car you would rather have is the Nash "400" Standard Six.

Comparison confirms its style superiority. Comparison of this car with others at its price also brings out the fact that the "400" high-compression motor is smoother in its action, more dynamic in its power, ahead in engineering excellence. Here are 7 bearings instead of 3 or 4, Bohnalite invar strut pistons instead of the cast iron type, full pressure lubrication for dependability and durability.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Dainty Sleeveless Frock for Mother's Girl.

6531. Printed voile was chosen for this very attractive model. The long waist portions blouse above the belt. The skirt has bare godets joined to shayed sections creating pleasing fulness. The back of the skirt flares also. A shaped yoke collar finishes the round neck. The shoulders are long on the upper part of the arm. Taffeta in a plain or figured weave could be used for this design. Combinations of material are also desirable for it. The godets could be of plain material.

The pattern for this dress is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. To make the dress for a 12 year size will require 2¾ yards of 35 inch material. To make the yoke collar of contrasting material as shown in the large illustration, will require 1/3 yard 35 inches wide. To finish collar and armseye edges with bias binding, will require 2 yards 1½ inch wide.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Fashion Book Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps to The Freeman for our up-to-date Spring and Summer 1929 Book of Fashions showing color plates, and containing 600 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Credit Due Henry VIII

Whatever his shortcomings, to Henry VIII we owe the charm of the English home today. With all the beauty of the early Norman manner—its tall ascending growth, Gothic leaded windows and paneled walls—it lacked comfort and grace within.

Searching all Europe for the best that would combine, Henry VIII added graceful Italian iron grill work, elaborately decorated ceilings and beautiful hangings from France and other lands.

English noblemen were not slow to follow, and the result—that rare combination of dignity, beauty and charm—the English manor.—Exchange.

Wood for Lead Pencils

The forest service says that the red cedar, from which lead pencils are made, grows all through the eastern part of the country. The lead pencils are made from the heart wood, and probably the trees suitable for this purpose are about fifty years old.

ELEANOR GUNN ON FASHIONS

When "Stepping Out" Be Correctly Shod

New York—The opera pump is conceded by most authorities on the subject of footwear as being correct type of slipper for evening, and not incorrect for other than sports occasions. This in a measure simplifies the sometimes difficult matter of selecting smart shoes, some outstanding examples of which are shown.

The opera pump is helped in lengthening the ankle line, and this, in view of lengthened evening frocks is considered highly important.

There seems to be no effort made to relate hosiery and shoe shades, the possible exception to this being when a grey ensemble is being carried out even to footwear. Obviously the tendency in hosiery is to pronounced sunburned shades, this applying to evening as well as to sports hose.

The success of lisle and silk and lisle mesh stockings seems to preclude a waning interest in plain chiffon silk hose, and impression further born out by the fact that not only novelty clocks but novelty anklet decorations have met with response. With figured dresses and fancy footwear both in vogue, there is a natural feeling for unobtrusive hosiery effects.

From all smart resorts come the report that white shoes trimmed with brown lead for sports and general resort wear, white stockings however being ignored by fashionables bent on enhancing their suntan attained by fair or artificial means.

Shoes are more frequently of two than one kind and are inclined toward dutone effects as well.

Nasturtiums Are Used to Trim Some Felt Hats

The new hats show various sorts of trimming. Of course, many of them are untrimmed, save for folds and tucks of the fabric of which they are made. And these are decidedly good looking, these self-trimmed hats. Becoming, too, for they are cut and shaped and pulled and pruned into the most alluring and becoming backgrounds and frames for the faces under them.

Nasturtiums are used to trim some of the new felts. Strange, when flowers are such a rarity on hats. But nasturtiums have a vogue that the milliners have been swift to seize upon. The flowers, of course, are not wreathed or gathered about the hat, but grouped in a bunch at one side, over the ear.

THE UNCONSIDERED ELEMENT

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

"THE trouble with me," Edith Marks told herself as she went about her housework, "is that I'm not used to work and solitude. I'm like a butterfly. I want to look pretty and have a good time. But here . . ."

She let her gaze stray to the window to rest upon the drifts of snow piled up about the little house. A year before she had left her luxurious home in the East to come here as the bride of Billy Marks, a municipal doctor.

"Two years more before we leave here and Billy seeks a practice of his own," Edith mused. "I'll go crazy before then. If it hadn't been for Anna I'd have gone crazy before this."

Anna was an old woman, who, with her son, was their nearest neighbor.

Edith remembered her first letter home following her arrival at the village. "Well, here we are, Liz," she had written to her sister, "a million miles from nowhere after a wonderful honeymoon at Banff and other points west. And there's not even a railway here. We had to drive down from Cardurcis, twenty miles away. And will be here for three years! But I'll never get lonesome so long as I have Billy."

But she had—so lonely at times she wept from longing. And there were no social events such as she had been accustomed to, which formerly had been the sole matter of her existence.

Suddenly as she stood there musing, the door was thrown open and Billy entered, stamping the snow from his overshoes and shaking it from his fur coat.

"'Lo, Honey," he greeted her, "How's tricks?"

"Fine," Edith lied. "Many patients today?"

"The stork and I had a busy day at Wilson's—twins. Two fine boys," Billy informed her as she placed his supper before him.

"Well, Edie, here it's winter again," he resumed after a pause. "I think we'll go skating this winter. Good exercise and lots of fun. And I'm going to buy a toboggan. There are some fine hills around here for sport like that, and we'll have a whale of a time. What did we do most of last winter?"

"Oh, played the gramophone and listened to the radio," Edith volunteered.

"And I listened to you sing," Billy added. "So I guess I had the worst of it. . . . Why, dear, what's the matter? Why the tears?"

Edith tried to stem her tears. She wanted to be brave. But they came in spite of her. Billy's words had brought the memory of her loneliness overwhelmingly upon her.

"Oh, Billy," she sobbed, wiping her cheeks, "can't we go to Cardurcis for the winter? It's so—so lonely here when we're shut in by the snow."

Billy's arms were about her, comforting her, his brow puckered thoughtfully. This was the first intimation Edith had given him that she was not altogether happy.

"Why, dear," he explained, "I didn't know you felt like that about it. But I can't go to Cardurcis for the winter. I'd be too far away from my patients. But you can spend the winter there if you like."

"It would be no better there without you," Edith objected. "But what a baby I am to be so silly."

"We'll talk it over," Billy stated gravely. "We'll find some way out. And by the way, I'm going to Cardurcis tomorrow. Wouldn't you like to come?"

"I'd love to," Edith responded, attempting a smile.

So in the morning Edith and Billy prepared for their trip to Cardurcis, Edith's spirits had risen at the contemplated journey, and they talked and laughed like two happy children as they drove off in Billy's cutter. But in Cardurcis, at the sight of the people there and the things that were denied her, Edith's longings seized her anew. But she said nothing of it to Billy.

It was dark when they arrived home that night, but a light was burning in the house, which was strange.

They were met at the door by Anna's son.

"Mother broke her leg. She slipped on some ice," he informed Billy in his broken English. "You've got to come over right away."

Edith's face paled and she gave a little cry.

"Anna! My best friend!" she exclaimed. "Oh, poor soul! Billy, I'm going with you."

They found the old woman lying on her bed. Edith's heart was torn at the sight of her suffering.

"Oh, Billy, Billy, do something, quick!" she pleaded. "Oh, Anna, my poor dear. . . ."

Billy, quietly professional now, paid no heed to her hysterical pleadings as he busied himself over the injured woman. And Edith, grown silent, obeyed almost mechanically his terse commands as he enlisted her assistance in alleviating the pain of the suffering woman. It was the first time she had seen Billy in the course of his professional work; and while her heart was suffering with her friend, she watched in fascination his deft, sure fingers in their mission of healing. She was awed by the quickness with which he had the injured leg bandaged and the woman resting comfortably in her bed.

"How wonderful it is—to be able to do that," she breathed, her eyes bright with pride in his achievement. "You're sure she's all right?"

"I've done all I can tonight," Billy answered quietly. "I'll visit her again in the morning. Let's go home."

Edith stooped and pressed her lips against the woman's cheek as they turned to go.

"Ought we to leave her so soon?" she queried.

"We can do nothing more for her tonight," Billy replied gently. "And she'll rest better if she's left alone. Her son can care for any of her needs till morning."

Both remained strangely quiet throughout the journey home. Later, when they were preparing for bed, Billy took a slip of paper from his pocket and handed it to Edith.

"Here's a present for you, Edie," he told her. "I bought it for you when we were in Cardurcis today."

Edith gazed at the paper with widening eyes.

"A railway ticket home!" she exclaimed. "Why, Billy—"

"This is no place for a girl that's been brought up to a life of luxury and ease," Billy responded gravely. "I've been a fool not to see that before. And I want you to be happy, dear."

Then suddenly Edith threw both arms around her husband's neck.

"Oh, Billy," she whispered softly. "I'm the one that's been such a little fool. And I was selfish. I've been thinking only of myself, while you have been helping others and doing so much good. I've wanted to be only a butterfly when I could help you so much in your work. So we'll get the money back for this ticket—and save it for the heir. It won't be so lonely when we have him to think of, will it? And we'll save the money from my ticket, too. . . ."

"Your ticket? What do you mean, Honey?"

"I bought one also when we were in Cardurcis today. But I won't need either of them now."

Half of Free State Engaged in Farming

The Free State's census of production shows that more than half of its workers are engaged upon the land. Out of a total population of 2,971,992, there are 1,307,662 engaged in gainful occupations, and of these 672,129 are employed in agriculture. The Free State has a larger proportion of producers to population than Great Britain, but they fall far short in the more remunerative industrial occupations. Of the agricultural workers 121,957 are women. People employed in the professions number 55,441 and of these the majority, 20,505, are women. This result is arrived at by including the nuns in the convents and schools, of whom there are 9,209. There are 3,898 Catholic clergy in addition to 1,111 Christian Brothers and other monks and 2,558 clerical students. The census has dissipated the idea that the public service in the Free States is overstaffed. Including the army there are altogether 37,333 on the public pay sheets, or 28 per thousand as compared with 29 per thousand in Great Britain. Women are found in all occupations, except perhaps the building trade. There is even a woman chimney sweep; a woman manages a brewery and another a distillery.

Red Indian Recreations

The principal game among the southeastern Indians was one similar to lacrosse except that it was played with two rackets instead of one. Of wider popularity was the chunkey game, in which a stone roller or hoop of twisted withes was propelled along the ground and each player threw a stick to mark what he thought would be the hoop's resting place. In another sport men and women were opponents around a pole which they endeavored to strike with balls above a certain mark. The women's favorite game was dice made of cane or bits of wood, but this was considered beneath male dignity. A game like shinny was played by the Natchez boys, while in Virginia, and among the Creeks young men played a game similar to football with great enthusiasm. —Detroit News.

MATHEMATICIANS DISCARD AXIOMS OF OLD SCHOOLS

Soundness of Euclid's Geometry Questioned Today, Professor Hedrick Declares.

Los Angeles.—Mathematics as well as all science pursued by man is beset by doubts and insecurities, until there is nothing that can be accepted as truth except by faith, declared Dr. Earle R. Hedrick, professor of mathematics, in delivering the fifth annual research lecture of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Doctor Hedrick explained the new movement that has characterized the study of mathematics in the last 100 years and brought spectacularly to the attention of the public recently by the hypotheses of Einstein.

"The work of Einstein would not have been possible except for the fact that for 100 years preceding him there had been at work a school of mathematicians which set up doubts about the soundness of Euclidean geometry," said Doctor Hedrick in the course of his lecture.

"More new thought on the subject of mathematics has been recorded in our age than in all the history of human knowledge prior thereto. We have men living, men who recently visited this institution, who have made history by their discoveries in the science.

"We are now learning not to accept anything as an incontrovertible axiom. We make a certain set of assumptions, and then see what results those assumptions lead to. This is as far as we dare go in asserting that any proposition is true.

"Euclid declared that parallel lines can never meet and for hundreds of years this has been one of our 'self-evident truths.' Today we cannot say what happens to parallel lines as they extend far beyond our ken into the uttermost reaches of the universe. So we must regard this old axiom and others with doubt, and it is this doubt that has given rise to new speculations about the universe about us, and necessitated our accepting the so-called truths of arithmetic even only on faith."

Do Women Make Good as Flyers? Flyers Differ

East St. Louis, Ill.—Do women make good flyers?

Chief Instructor Clyde E. Brayton of Parke Air college says "No." Lady Mary Heath, British aviatrix, says "Yes," and makes it clear she doesn't mean maybe.

When Lady Mary Heath was here recently to address the student body of the air school, students looked forward to an argument—for Brayton had put himself publicly on record in a newspaper interview as believing that "women as a class" were incapable of learning to fly.

Brayton failed to show up. But Lady Mary stated her case as follows:

"I quite disagree with him—naturally. We have found in England that women who are athletic, who have trained the eye and hand with tennis, rowing and other sports, are ideal flying material and learn to handle a ship quite as well as a man.

"On the other hand, it's true, as Mr. Brayton says, that women who haven't that background are poor material for flying pilots. But so would the men be if they had no training."

Praise Given Nu-Erb For Restoring Health To O'Neil Street Lady

Indigestion, Gas, Neuritis And Nervousness Were Quickly Routed By The Popular Medicine She Says

"After what Nu-Erb has done for me, I think it is just a wonderful medicine," said Mrs. C. Van Benschoten, 98 O'Neil St., Kingston, N. Y., in a recent statement to the Nu-Erb man at McBride Drug Store, 312 Wall Street.

"For the past year or more, I had been suffering from severe stomach disorders. My food soured and formed a distressing gas after each meal. This gas pressed up against my heart causing it to flutter and at times almost taking my breath away. I was also troubled a great deal with neuritis and my nerves were in an extremely weakened condition.

"I had tried lots of other medicines, but nothing helped me until I started using the Nu-Erb. It has put an end to the indigestion and relieved the gas and other distress in my stomach. I am no longer bothered with the neuritis and my nerves are so much stronger that I now sleep soundly all night long and feel better in every way. I, for one, will gladly recommend Nu-Erb to anybody who is suffering as I did."

The great herbal remedy, Dr. French's Nu-Erb is growing daily in demand because of its certain action on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Its pure herbal juices tone and regulate these vital organs and drive poisonous waste matter from the system, which is so often the cause of rheumatism and neuritis. As a blood purifier there seems to be nothing to equal this splendid herbal medicine and being made from nature's own herbs, roots and barks it is perfectly safe for any one to take.

FREEMAN WANT ADS BRING RESULTS!

Three Men Buy Ellenville Press

The Ellenville Press, founded in 1879 and conducted as an independent Democratic paper, in its last issue this week announced its sale to Harold F. Schue and Alfred J. Homan, of Liberty, and George A. Yaeger of Highland and Liberty, transfer of the plant, equipment, and real estate to become effective on Monday next.

The sale was made by Prof. Edwin C. Hoemer, as administrator of the estate of his son, Edwin C. Hoemer, Jr., who until his death about a month ago owned and conducted the Press. Prof. Hoemer will retire from active business but will remain in Ellenville, where he is also head of the public school system.

The new owners just a year ago acquired the Liberty Register at Liberty from former Congressman Charles B. Ward of DeBruce. They will operate both newspapers under separate establishments. The editor of the Press has not yet been announced. Mr. Homan, who has been business manager of the Register, will move to Ellenville to assume the business end of the Press. Mr. Schue will remain as editor of the Register. Mr. Yaeger, who is secretary to Congressman H. J. Pratt of this Congressional district will have no active part in the conduct of either paper.

The Press, now unincorporated, will be incorporated. Instead of an independent Democrat, its politics will be independent.

The new owners are not new to this section or to the newspaper field. Mr. Schue is a Syracuse University journalism school graduate and was for a time on the Rome Daily Sentinel. He became editor of the Liberty Register in 1922 and during his service his newspaper has been awarded prizes for make-up and editorial excellence.

Mr. Homan for several years represented Sullivan and Orange counties for the Willard Storage Battery Company, and was for a time assistant service manager of the Walker Electric Truck Company for the metropolitan area. He has been Sullivan county commander of the American Legion, and is first lieutenant in the Reserve Corps of the Army.

Mr. Yaeger was city editor of the old Middletown Daily Argus and the Times-Press, and for a year editor of the Liberty Register. Until Congressman Charles B. Ward's retirement in 1924 he was his secretary, and is now secretary to Mr. Ward's successor, Congressman Pratt of Highland. Mr. Yaeger was an organizer of the Middletown Post, American Legion, and was its first vice-commander.

Mr. Shue, Mr. Homan and Mr. Yaeger are all veterans of the World War, and members of the American Legion.

Paris Women Use Fancy Garters to Carry Drugs

Paris—Fancy garters, worn just above the knee, are taking the place of handbags here as the favorite means of smuggling narcotics and other drugs into the country, customs officials declare.

Several women who have been arrested here in connection with the selling of such contraband declared they imported this method from America. They said this style has been worked successfully for sometime past in France, enabling elegantly dressed women to meet liners at the port and carry the drugs to various cities throughout the country.

It is estimated that enough pints of drugs can be carried in these garters to supply the demands of a fashionable opium den for several weeks. The facility with which the tubes can be detached also makes the sale of dope to transient buyers extremely easy.

Hull, Mass.—Capt. Erick Nelson has sailed the seven seas without ever being seasick, but he was stricken recently during a ten-foot voyage on land.

Nelson, who has remained aboard the schooner as caretaker, said the rough treatment made him seasick for the first time in his life.

SUMMER PRUNING BAD FOR GRAPES

Practice Delays Maturity and Causes Loss of Sugar.

"Summer pruning delays maturity and decreases the sugar content of grapes," says Richard Wellington, horticulturist at the Geneva experiment station speaking at Cornell's farm and home week here recently.

Mr. Wellington described the experiments performed at Geneva to determine the effect of summer pruning on grapes. He stated that as a rule the late maturing varieties show a greater decrease in sugars and a more striking difference in maturity. According to Mr. Wellington, Delaware is the only variety which gives a higher sugar content when summer pruned.

"The lack of maturity was related to a decrease in sugar, although this relation varies with the variety," he stated.

"Just what effect this pruning will have upon next year's crop and the reduction in winter hardiness, it is now too early to state, but it is probable that the vine as well as the fruit stored up less food, such as starches, and consequently should be more subject to adversities. Since the fruit of the summer-pruned grapes was in no way superior to unpruned grapes, either in size or appearance, in all the late varieties was much more immature, and in all varieties but two contained less sugar, the practice is condemned as being unprofitable and, in fact, injurious."

Cover Tree Wounds With Grafting Wax or Paint

Young fruit trees that have been injured by rabbits or mice may be saved by covering the barked places with lead paint or better still with grafting wax. If the rodents have not been destroyed or the trees protected against them, they should be examined and all injuries treated at once.

If the wounds are small a covering of grafting wax or paint will be sufficient. However, if a tree is more than half girdled it should be bridge grafted early next spring.

Bridge grafting is done by inserting one or more cions over the wound, the number depending upon the size of the wound. Cions are cut slightly longer than the height of the wound so as to arch outward a little from the tree.

Cions for bridge or other grafting are selected while the trees are dormant and stored in moistened sand or moss and kept in a cool place until time for grafting. Only terminal growth made the last season or well ripened watersprouts are used as cions, and it is important that they be in good condition at the time for grafting.

Orchards Different in Regard to All Ailments

No two orchards are alike in regard to the occurrence or the severity of attack of the common injurious diseases and insects. Where the grower, therefore, has sprayed his orchard properly for a number of years and knows the insects and diseases that are present, he may be able to change or vary the spraying suggestions making the interval between application longer or shorter as required. He may also change the kinds and proportions of spraying chemicals. If he knows his conditions and has studied his problems carefully, the alterations made may be beneficial and at the same time less expensive.

Brick's Value in Building

In the manufacture of brick they are burned for days under a temperature of 2,000 degrees. Brick cannot burn or crumble under heat thereafter. They increase the fire resistance of a home many times over.

Alaska May Be Dubbed Original Ellis Island

It is now evident that America was originally peopled by immigrants from Asia and it is probable that Alaska was the first scene of human history on this continent. Edward M. Weyer described at New Haven the relics yielded by prehistoric villages discovered during the explorations in Alaska. "The American continents are younger with regard to human occupation than the Eastern hemisphere," according to Weyer. "The very first immigrants to them, the forerunners of the American Indians, doubtless came from Asia. Thus Alaska, which lies much closer to Asia than any other part of America, probably was the gateway through which passed these early Asiatic immigrants.

"The northwestern corner of North America, therefore, can be regarded as the first scene of human history in America. No aborigines of Arctic America, so far as is known, ever used a written language. Consequently the mute relics of material culture are the only source of historical information here. Nevertheless the buried prehistoric villages of Alaska yield secrets to the archeologist."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Famous Carnac Stones Puzzles to Scientists

The Stones of Carnac in Brittany are one of the wonders of the age. Nobody knows when they were erected, or why. Nowhere throughout Europe can there be seen such perplexing evidence of an early race combining the most primitive simplicity with indications of a profound knowledge. Vast alignments of huge stones attract the eye, headed or terminated by circles or dolmens (table stones commonly called cromlechs) extending at intervals as far as seven miles to Locmariaquer and ranging out in all directions to Erdeven, St. Barbe, Kermario, Kerlescan and the Quiberon. Intersected among these are tumuli, menhirs, tolmen (holed stones) and engraved stones.

To the casual visitor they are remnants of stone worship, serving places of records of conquered foes and victories past. Their strange markings are exactly similar to the thumb marks of the human hand, but done on a large scale and with wonderful accuracy. The height of the Egyptian columns and obelisks is almost exactly the same. What relation has Carnac with Egypt?

Calf Scours Is Usually Caused by Indigestion

Calf scours is a common disease of the digestive tract and is usually caused by indigestion. The calf that scours easily in life may be seriously handicapped and of course sometimes dies. Prevention is best but not always possible. Care should be taken that the calf is not overfed, that the milk is always fed warm, and that the milk is uniformly sweet and fed from clean buckets. If scours occur, cut the milk down one-half and give a dose of one to three ounces of castor oil or of mineral oil. Raw eggs may be used to correct the trouble. Two or three tablespoonfuls of lime water in the milk is sometimes effective.

Cocoa Coins of Diospolis

A Florentine who had resided in the West Indies introduced chocolate into Italy, whence its use gradually spread through Europe, though not without opposition.

Its introduction into Prussia was prohibited by Frederick the Great. A famous Paris physician, Renou, on the other hand, proclaimed cocoa as one of the most noble of Creations, far more worthy to be the food of the gods than nectar and ambrosia, and Linnaeus, noted Swedish botanist, who gave cocoa its scientific classification, coined a name "Theobroma" from two Greek words meaning "food of the gods," which remains its scientific name today.

Early Umbrellas Clumsy

The first fashionable sunshades imported into England were luxurious affairs, composed on the outside of fine feathers. During Queen Anne's reign a more practical oiled silk came into use and umbrellas began to be used as much on rainy days as they were under the summer sun. These early English specimens were clumsy affairs made of heavy waxcloth with cane ribs. When wet, the material stuck together and opening or closing them was a job for a superman. It was not until 1852 that Samuel Fox invented the modern type.—Detroit News.

Death Whittles Ranks Of War's Pigeon Aces

With the death of the wartime pigeon hero named President Wilson, Spike and Mocker are the only survivors of a famous pigeon trio. The soldiers are releasing pigeons as is done in battle.

Washington (AP) — Spike and Mocker, hero birds of the World War, are survivors of an illustrious winged trio which saved many lives in the Argonne.

Out of 20,000 carrier pigeons operating with the Signal Corps of the United States army, only three were conspicuously mentioned by the war department for gallantry in action.

The recent death of the third, President Wilson, at Fort Monmouth, N. J., broke up the trio which once hurled its courageous way through terrific fire and delivered precious messages safely.

Official reports concerning the feathered ace's condition were transmitted to signal corps headquarters here as if he were a wounded general. The last before his death reads:

"President Wilson, the war hero pigeon, is getting very frail, not sick but just gradually getting weaker and fading away."

President Wilson, assigned to the tank corps, flew through a heavy fog and rain during the Meuse-Argonne at nearly a mile a minute for 21 miles. He delivered his communication enclosed in the tiny aluminum cylinder still attached to one leg. The other leg had been shot away.

Deprived of their leader, Spike and Mocker still receive all the homage due them. They are kept in the cleanest, airiest of lofts at Fort Monmouth. They are fed the choicest canary seed, rice and Canadian peas. Spike has a young son, Sunnybrook, who already has won a peacetime championship.

But never will young Sunnybrook have the same grim, intelligent look of old Spike, who delivered 52 important messages from the front lines in France to the American headquarters. Flying through the thicket of the fighting Spike never received a wound. His pedigree is uncertain. He is not handsome, but is strong and aggressive.

Mocker does not bear the charmed life of Spike. But he is a hero. He homed in wonderful time on the Beaumont front, September 12, 1918, carrying a message giving the location of several heavy German batteries.

When he reached American headquarters "one eye had been destroyed by shrapnel and his head was a welter of clotted blood." But the information he brought enabled the American artillery to silence the enemy's guns within 20 minutes and undoubtedly saved many American lives.

When they die Spike and Mocker will have the same memorial accorded President Wilson and Cher Ami, another hero pigeon. Their bodies will be stuffed and kept in some prominent place. President Wilson's is to be kept at Fort Monmouth museum. That of Cher Ami is in the National museum here.

MAN WAS TRYING TO FLY BEFORE CHRIST

Experiments With Queer Devices in Ancient Times.

New York.—Although authenticated records show that man first rode the air successfully only 126 years ago, aviation as an idea is at least 2,500 year old.

Indications are that men were experimenting with fantastic devices for the conquest of the air long before the birth of Christ, according to a compilation of ancient chronicles made by the Golden Book.

Although the narrated flight of Archytas of Tarentum in 400 B. C., recorded by Gellius, is regarded largely as a flight of imagination, it is accepted as an indication that even then men were attempting seriously to imitate the birds.

"Many men of eminence among the Greeks, and Favorinus the philosopher," says Gellius, "have in a most positive manner assured us that the model of a dove or pigeon, formed in wood by Archytas, was so contrived as by a certain mechanical art and power to fly, so nicely was it balanced by weights and put in motion by hidden and enclosed air."

Da Vinci's Plan Scientific.

Ovid's story of the fall of Icarus shows that the ambition was still alive in the First century of the Christian era, as does other mention of man-made wings and ships modeled after birds.

At about the time that Columbus discovered America, Leonardo da Vinci gave his famous and scientifically sound plan for a flying machine. "A bird is an instrument working according to mathematical law, an instrument which it is within the capacity of man to reproduce with all its movements, though not with a corresponding degree of strength, for it is deficient in the power of maintaining equilibrium," he said. "To attain to the true science of the movement of birds in the air, it is necessary to give first the science of the winds. . . . Unless the movement of the wing is swifter than the movement of the air so pressed, the air will not become condensed and the bird will not support itself."

But even before Leonardo, Roger Bacon in the Thirteen century conceived the idea of an artificial bird—an idea which is the subject of experimentation even today, the Golden Book article points out. Bacon set forth that "an instrument may be made to fly withal if one sit in the midst of the instrument, and do turn an engine, by which the wings, being artifically composed, may beat the air after the manner of the flying bird."

The compilation also contains first-hand accounts of the two ascensions by which the Montgolfier brothers and Pilatre de Rozier proved the practicality of the first hot-air balloons in 1783.

First Successful Flight.

On June 5 of that year at Annonay, France, the Montgolfiers sent up their first balloon, a bag 110 feet in circumference and weighing 300 pounds. Without a passenger, it shot up to a height of 6,000 feet in ten minutes, and traveled a mile and a half before it descended gently to earth.

On October 15 of the same year, in another machine built by the Montgolfiers, de Rozier rode the air for the first time successfully, stoking the fire which heated the air within the gas-bag with straw and wool.

"After a few trials close to the ground, he desired to ascend to a great height," says the account. "The machine was accordingly permitted to rise, and ascend as high as the ropes, which were placed there purposely to detain it, would allow, which was about 84 feet. There M. de Rozier kept the machine afloat four minutes and twenty-five seconds by throwing straw and wool into the grate to keep up the fire. Then the machine descended exceedingly gently."

Fish Liars Club Now Issuing Liar's License

Waterloo, N. Y.—Prompted by a real need, the Liars club of Waterloo now issues a liar's license.

It all started when W. Fred Bacon, an attorney, returned from Florida with a story, accompanied by photographs, of catching 88 fish totaling 800 pounds in a single day. He was immediately awarded a card of honor by the Liars club.

But the lying became so rampant that the executive committee decided to issue a card permitting its members to falsify. The card allows recklessness with the truth in all matters pertaining to fish or fishing for the current season. The grand seal of Ananias is affixed to the document.

Link Ancient Egypt China in Snake Rites

Stockholm.—Belief that the Chinese during the Stone age had the same kind of snake worship as the inhabitants of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Persia and Russian Turkestan, was expressed by Prof. J. G. Anderson, Sweden's foremost expert on Chinese archeology.

Professor Anderson based his belief on the discovery of the cover of a Chinese grave urn made during the Stone age in China.

Around the head of the figure of the urn, and down the man's back, Professor Anderson found twined a plaited braid of snakes corresponding almost exactly to snake designs found on Stone age objects discovered in northern Africa and in the Near East.

Newport, R. I.—Theodore R. Pell can hit a golf ball 240 yards or more with a tennis racquet. He did so in a close match with Harry Payne Bingham, who used all his golf clubs. Pell swung his racquet for all strokes except on the greens, where he employed a mashie. He did nine holes in 42 to Bingham's 40.

Northampton, Mass.—For the holiday dinner of salmon and green peas which is the custom in these parts Calvin Coolidge had a 24-pound fish, more than three feet long, the gift of Robert Walton Goelet, who caught it in Canada. Mr. Coolidge said it completely filled the kitchen sink.

Speculator, N. Y.—For ten minutes in this section of the Adirondacks it snowed so much that holiday motorists, unable to see, had to stop in order to avoid collision. The temperature was 50.

New York—A trans-Atlantic cable 47 years old broken in two places two and one half miles under water has been repaired. The steamship Lord Kelvin has spliced in 55 miles of new cable at sea within a month.

Pasadena, Cal.—Members of Phi Beta Phi, a sorority, are forbidden to smoke at any places frequented by college students. A resolution to that effect has been passed at the National Convention.

Newport, R. I.—Society is delighted with Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church's coach and four high-stepping bays. She drove one party on the holiday to open the Newport airport and another down Ocean Drive to the country club.

Havana—Some 2,000 families with titles dating from early colonial days are perturbed. A new law forbids the use of such titles on legal documents.

Budapest—Louis Wenchkheim and Baron Mario Ecmen, Viennese, have been severely wounded in a duel with cavalry sabres. As soon as their injuries were dressed they were taken out of Hungary, as the law provides severe penalties for duelling.

London—Ambassador Dawes is a 100 per cent Chicagoan. He so informed holiday diners, adding: "I don't feel like I have to apologize for coming from Chicago."

New York—The most astounding saga that the world has ever known is the characterization by Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller, historian, of Lindbergh's story. "He is as much an historic figure as Columbus or Magellan, the Cabots or Drake. He has received ovations greater than those extended to the Caesars or Nero or any ancient emperors."

West Point, N. Y.—Of 297 graduates at the Military Academy this year 115 have asked to be assigned to aviation.

THE GREAT ATLANTIC & PACIFIC TEA CO.

KINGSTONIANS ENJOY FLYERMOO THEATRE

Kingston folks who delight in thoroughly enjoyable and splendidly presented plays are finding their way in increasing numbers to the pretty little Riverbed Theatre at Milton, especially since theatre parties can be so well entertained for supper or dinner or after the play at the Yacoble Terrace which is Mr. Anderson's newest artistic venture.

"Hay Fever," (though why the name is a conundrum) which is the play this week is a remarkably witty comedy, full of clever and side-splitting funny situations. It calls for exceptionally good acting from each member of the cast if one is to really enjoy the amazing Bliss family and their invited (each member of the family issuing separate invitations unknown to the rest of the family) but unexpected guests. Miss Olga Birkbeck, who is the guest artist, here from England, plays the leading role of the still young and beautiful former actress-mother with subtlety and charm and a more completely satisfactory support as is given her would be hard to imagine.

There is one unique feature of the little theatre that is peculiarly attractive. It is that the actor folk and the audience are so close to each other that there is no need of artificial make-up, etc., and the audience feels as though it were making new friends of the characters in the play rather than of the actors and actresses, which shows how cleverly the acting is done.

Several theatre parties were expected tonight and tomorrow night to see this admirable comedy.

Next week the play will be of a different character, entitled, "Mr. Pim Passes By."

Useful Emery

Emery is a mineral. It is a common dark granular variety of corundum, containing more or less magnetite or hematite. On account of its great hardness, it is used in the form of powder, grains or larger masses for grinding and polishing.

Yearning for Red Hat Gets Boy in Trouble

La Plata, Mo.—A "whooper" hat led Leon Garlock, eleven-year-old schoolboy, into trouble here.

He longed for one of the new collegiate red hats. In fact, he told officers that he couldn't think of anything else. Finally his desire got the best of him. He broke into a local meat market, taking $25 from the cash register.

The boy was in such a hurry for his hat that he asked the proprietor of a clothing store to open up after closing hour in order that he might get one. The owner of the store became suspicious of Leon and called police. The boy confessed.

Britain Wastes Millions Carelessly Each Year

London.—Great Britain throws away $750,000,000 in petty waste every year. That's the computation of an unnamed authority quoted by the Sunday Express. One important item of waste he lists is $15,000,000 worth of mustard left on the edges of plates. He also lists soap, match ends, candle ends, cigarette butts, tickets, pins and clips, gas, electricity and fuel, bones, town refuse, tin cans and waste paper.

Five-Eyed Insects

All insects, with few exceptions, have five eyes. Two of these are the compound eyes, which are situated one on each side of the head. The three remaining eyes are of the ordinary kind and are found on top of the head. These are usually clustered closely together in the form of a triangle. The compound eyes are for normal vision; the three simple eyes, being more light sensitive, are able to distinguish between light and darkness. This is very important, especially for the night flying insects.

Radio Tends the Baby

An eastern mother whose husband is a radio expert, makes her radio set tend the baby. When she puts him in his crib upstairs she places the loud speaker near him. By turning the loud speaker into a microphone, by use of an adapter, when the baby wakes up and cries mother gets the signal by radio wherever her household duties may take her. This is done by reversing the radio set. No nursemaid was ever more watchful and unfailing.—Capper's Weekly.

NAVY READY FOR "SUB" DISASTERS

Divers and Equipment Prepared to Meet Future Major Accidents.

Washington.—The navy is prepared to meet the next major submarine accident, should one occur, with far more promptness and efficiency than was possible when the S-51 and S-4 sank with a large loss of life. A score of expert divers stand ready to provide the human element necessary to using the "hookeyes," marking buoys and "lungs" which offer mechanical means of rescue.

In a large water-filled cylinder at the Washington navy yard from 20 to 25 divers are constantly in training under artificial pressures simulating those to be found at from 150 to 300 feet below the surface. These men, trained by Lieut. Henry Hartley, assistant in charge of salvage operations on the S-4 and S-51, are graduated after three months and are distributed around the coast at all places where submarines operate.

Two Get U. S. Medals.

After stringent tests to determine their physical and mental fitness for deep sea diving, they are trained to work with tools far below the surface. Attaching pontoons, connecting airlines and other hazardous tasks are taught them thoroughly.

The idea of such a diving "school" originated with Lieut. C. B. Momsen, Chief Gunner C. L. Tibbals and Lieut. Henry Hartley. The former two recently received the distinguished service medal from President Hoover for developing the "lung" device which enables men to breathe while rising from a sunken "sub."

The need for better trained divers—and more of them—had been impressed on the navy by the S-51 tragedy. When, in December, 1927, the S-4 met with a similar fate, plans for this training were accelerated.

With limited funds a diving tank was built at the Washington navy yard, the men training part in December and the rest September 24, 1928, and were "graduated" February, 1929. Their final tests revealed five of them were capable of working at a depth of 150 feet, two at 175, one at 200, one at 250, and 13 at 300 feet.

This means, according to naval officers, that there are always available trained divers capable of working in any depth of water in which a submarine crew can be rescued.

Three Months' Course.

The Navy department keeps a list of all these men, what their diving record is, and where they may be reached. Should a submarine sink, a long-distance telephone call or telegram would bring to the aid of the "sub" a diver capable of utilizing the mechanical devices the navy has developed in any depth down to 300 feet.

No attempt, it was said, was made to train divers to descend to lower depth, for, with the present structure of submarines, they would be crushed should they go below 300 feet and attempts to rescue would be useless.

Present plans of the navy call for classes of 25 men at the diving school constantly. The course requires about three months. As soon as one group is graduated another takes its place.

Enrollment in the course, it was said, is voluntary. The divers, so far, have been recruited mosty from the petty officer class. No commissioned officers are included among the school's present alumni.

Within one year, it was said, work on the problem of submarine safety—carried out largely by Momsen, Tibbals, and Frank M. Hobson—has produced what the navy regards as almost sure salvation for submarine crews—the "lung." Light and compact, they can be stored easily in the limited spaces aboard undersea craft. The navy has ordered enough of them to provide one for each man on submarine duty.

The "lung" is merely a breathing apparatus, with a rubber tube which may be attached to the nose. It does not slip over the head as do diving helmets. And, by ascending slowly while using the device, one may avoid the much dreaded "cramps," it is said.

In addition to this invention the navy now has well designed "hookeyes" to which pontoons may be attached to raise sunken craft. Marker buoys have been developed also. These, simple to release, mark for surface boats the spot where the submarine lies.

Gravitation

Newton's law of gravitation is that any two bodies in the universe attract each other with a force which is directly proportional to the product of the masses, and inversely proportional to the square of the distance between them.

Most Valuable Buildings

According to Stanley K. Green, New York realtor, the Capitol in Washington is the most valuable building in America. He places its value at $53,000,000. The White House, he says, is worth $10,000,000, being the nation's most expensive dwelling.

Dangerous Reptile

The bite of the gila monster is exceedingly poisonous, the venom glands, minute scales, being in the lower jaw. These and closely related lizards are believed to be the only poisonous lizards. The gila monster received its name from the Gila river in Arizona.

NEW GRAND UNION MARKET IN POUGHKEEPSIE.

The Grand Union Company, nationally known chain food store operators, have opened in Poughkeepsie one of the finest and most complete food markets in the state. This food market not only handles groceries, meats and fish, fresh fruits and vegetables, but has large baked goods and delicatessen department and a fine luncheonette where lunches, afternoon tea and sodas are served.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 5 (AP).—Vigorous bull operations after the holiday in today's stock market encountered rather heavy profit-taking, but a wide assortment of important industrials and rails were sent into new high territory.

The market opened with a heavy accumulation of buying orders, resulting from the sudden breaking of the call money jam on Wednesday, when the rate tumbled from 12 to 7 per cent, and from the strength of American shares on the London market yesterday.

Call money renewed at 7 per cent, and although there was some calling of loans early in the session, replacement funds were easily found. Traders were inclined to move cautiously, however, on the theory that the technical position of the market had been weakened by the prolonged upturn.

There was little in the day's news to affect the price movement. Although the news coming to hand was generally favorable, including several more satisfactory June sales reports, and the taking of $5,000,000 in London by the Irving Trust Company.

Merger rumors were again rife, indicating a possible combination of United Aircraft and Sikorsky, Inland Steel and Republic, and a combination the natural gas properties of Columbia Gas and Electric and Cities Service. It was also reported that Texas Corp., Phillips Petroleum and Skelly Oil were forming a company to pipe natural gas to Chicago.

Quotations given by Parker McElroy & Co., members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 120 Broadway, New York city, branch office, Stuyvesant Hotel.

"While" and "When"

Dr. Frank Vizetelly says that "while" as a conjunction is definite and means "during the whole time that." Example: "You are safe while I am here." "When" is indefinite and means "at the time that." Example: "When the war is over the politicians will renew the fight."

Maverick Theatre Opens New Season

"Wedding Bells" Scores Success—Gladys Hurlbut Charms Audience—Three More Nights' Run.

By F. Gardner Clough.

The third "premiere" theatre performance in one week took place at Woodstock Thursday night at the famous Maverick Theatre, when "Wedding Bells", a comedy-farce, was presented to a large audience.

There is always a fascination in "first" nights; this week there is an additional interest in the Maverick Theatre which has commenced a new season under the direction of E. J. Ballantine, Gladys Hurlbut and Allan de Lano. Long before the "premiere" performance of Thursday evening was over, it was clearly certain that the new directors, the professional cast, and the happy selection for a "first" play had caught the sometimes elusive fancy of theatre audiences by the excellency of both the matter and manner of the entertainment; the players won the immediate quiet approval of an audience of distinguished theatre-goers.

There was something in the air which suggested that this large rustic theatre had outgrown its infancy; managers and directors had been working for many days in a mysterious back-stage annex; workmen had been rushing a high-powered electric light line through the woods to the theatre. But these things were forgotten when the curtain was raised on a metropolitan bachelor-apartment stage setting—and more so when the delightful comedy play got under way. And there was a growing feeling of pleasant surprise and applause as the play advanced with a perfectness of performance which had lost no whit of the erstwhile charm come from the atmosphere of the rustic theatre.

The Play.

"Wedding Bells" is a three-act comedy, or farce, in which several bachelors and deserted wives and faithless husbands get tangled up. The plot evolves one impossible situation after another; there are lines of spice and wit; in the end husbands are restored to their wives and peace and happiness descends with the closing curtain.

The outstanding parts were "Rosalie," played by Gladys Hurlbut, and "Reginald Carter" which was played by Carroll Ashburn. George Tawd as "Jackson" and Frances Allen as "Marcia" also belong with the headliner performers.

Gladys Hurlbut was given an ovation of applause on her entrance in the first act, and called back for three bows at the first curtain. Her acting had a naivete and charm that is born of a short stage experience, or a long one,—a charm that is more pleasing and astonishing if come from the first-mentioned parentage, as is doubtless her deserved laurel. As a young wife, her pseudo-sophistication and coyness were cleverly advanced and carried into the heart of a bachelor's apartment. In a battle of wits with another woman, she showed herself superior in feminine attributes. Miss Hurlbut's personality has none of the usual stage marks; natural advantages combined with a sincerity of part make her a delightful actress.

George Tawd as the butler kept his audience in laughter; his lines were by no means too easy, though his rendition came with the quiet ease of a consummate actor. Playing the leading male, Carroll Ashburn proved himself equal to a long and hard part. His varied and difficult lines were quite convincing. Frances Allen, Ian M. Wolfe and Maurice Wells had important parts which were handled in a professional manner.

Compared With Morley Theatres.

There was something about the whole cast, the whole play, the colorful audience and engaging atmosphere of the theatre that reminded the reviewer of the Morley theatres in Hoboken where the public has been finding diversion and entertainment the past six months.

Where the Morley group have gone in for elaborate technique and burlesquing of old plays, the Maverick theatre directors have commenced with perfect stage settings and machinery to offer entertainment that delights every theatre-goer; Allan de Lano, who directed the first production, seems to have given it the proper amount of seriousness to make the farce hold the fellow in the audience who came in with a long face and went away with a broad one. The play seemed to hold the artist or business man by virtue of its sheer entertaining quality.

To E. J. Ballantine and Neil Reber went high praise for the newly designed settings and draperies. Mr. Ballantine designed a huge curtain that works without a catch or a halt; it is a curtain that gives the Maverick theatre a new dignity. Another innovation at the theatre is the classic music prelude and intermision concert made possible by the installation of an amplifier by the Stowall Studios.

The Thursday night audience consisted of many celebrities summering at the art colony. It was an audience such as gathers only at the Maverick Theatre. No few of the artists had come early to the Maverick grounds with picnic suppers; they enjoyed fireworks; they came to the theatre in a holiday mood, and were in no way disappointed by the play. Later a number of people from Kingston and other places came for the performance at the theatre.

"Wedding Bells" continues at the Maverick theatre at 8:45 Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights of this week. It is expected that a large number of people will attend all performances; the reviewer recommends the play as wholesome and highly entertaining.

Plane Calling On Hudson Straits

Ottawa, July 5 (AP).—The "Untin' Bowler, the plane manned by Parker Cramer, Robert Gast, co-pilot, and Robert Woods, aviation editor of the Chicago Tribune, was in the air at 5:27 this morning, according to a message received by the Federal Wireless Station at Port Burwell, on the Hudson Straits.

The government radio men in the northern post heard the plane calling at that hour. The signals were loud.

Reports from Port Burwell indicate that the weather along the Hudson Straits is bad. The government station is broadcasting the weather every other hour for the benefit of the fliers.

While the plane's situation can be only conjectured, the Burwell message is taken to indicate one of two things; either that the 'Untin' Bowler took the air in order to receive the weather reports, or, in view of the loudness of the signals, that it was continuing its flight.

Analysis Shows Flier Was Drunk

Mineola, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—A report of Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, who made a chemical analysis of the vital organs of Wilmer Stulz, trans-Atlantic flier who was killed with his two passengers in an airplane accident last Monday, declares "the man was very drunk at the time of his death."

The Nassau county prosecutor's office announced Dr. Goettler's findings today. He made the analysis at the order of county officials who investigated the accident.

Assistant District Attorney Phillip Huntington said Dr. Goettler's report stated there was a "large amount of alcohol in the stomach and brain," that there was "alcohol in the liver and kidney," and "the conclusion is that the man was very drunk at the time of of his death."

Stulz and his companions were killed when his plane went into a tailspin while he was stunting at an altitude of 300 feet near Roosevelt Field.

Names of Cloud Formations

The idea of giving names to various kinds of cloud formation was first attempted in the early part of the Nineteenth century by a man named Lamarck, but his terms were not well chosen. A simpler form was devised about 1803 by Luke Howard, which seemed to answer the purpose and was generally accepted. Howard classified clouds according to their appearance, recognizing three primary types—cirrus, cumulus and stratus—and four derivative, or compound forms—cirro-cumulus, cirro-stratus, cumulo-stratus and cumulo-cirro-stratus, or nimbus. Thus, he defined seven varieties.

"Oh, I'm just going round to see Bill and wish him luck with that youngster of his."

"Then you're too late."

"What?" Surely it hasn't died?"

"No, the youngster's all right, but the cigar box is empty."—Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph.

Camels in Australia

Many camels are used in Australia as beasts of burden. For instance, from Wyndham in northwestern Australia the cattle stations are served by camel trains which carry supplies for hundreds of miles into the interior. "The camels are driven by Afghans," says the National Geographic society. "Camel teams are familiar sights in the streets of the little township, hauling in the great wagonloads of firewood from the outlying district. The first camels were brought to Australia for the use of the early explorers. Later a fine type of dromedary was imported for breeding purposes."

Organ's Humble Origin

It is believed probable by antiquarians that the huge modern pipe organs used in churches and theaters owe their origin to a small Chinese mouth instrument, in which bamboo tubes were used for pipes. The ancient instrument resembled in appearance the modern saxophone.

NEW YORK PLANS IMMENSE GROWTH

Envisages Great City of Twenty Millions.

New York.—A great city of the future, providing for a population of 20,000,000 with its industries, schools, homes and facilities for comfortable living, is envisaged in the regional planning committee's report for a new and greater New York city.

The report contains proposals designed to meet a situation of continuous growth in the metropolitan area. It considers a city of 5,528 square miles in and about New York, and recommends a vast system of airports, parks, playgrounds, railway, highway, rapid transit and parkway communications, and the building of new bridges and tunnels wherever necessary.

The report was sponsored by the Russel Sage foundation at a cost of $1,000,000 and represented the work of seven years. It was presented by George McAneny, a member of the regional planning committee, before a crowded meeting at the Engineering Societies' building recently.

The regional plan looks ahead to 1965 and takes as its city 22 counties in and about New York. The area considered is a tenth that of England, as large as the state of Connecticut and nearly five times the size of Rhode Island.

This world city, so vast that the mind of man had never before attempted to cope with such a problem, would be modeled not only for the efficiency of industry but for happiness of its millions of inhabitants.

There would be parks, playgrounds, golf courses and boulevards, and enough transportation facilities so that the people could move about comfortably and live without undue crowding.

Since the future of aviation is "an unpredictable thing," the plan provides for 16 new airports, making a total of 38.

From these airports passengers would be coming and going in a steady stream. The motif of speed would be maintained in a metropolitan belt line, connecting with all railroads entering the region, so that all points of the city could be reached easily by rail, both by passengers and in the handling of food stuffs and freight.

The city would contain 421 separate communities, in the states of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut—all the territory within a radius of 50 miles from the New York city hall.

Elizabeth Popular as Name for Babies

Berkeley, Calif.—A baby girl born now has an extremely strong chance of being named Elizabeth. This name has replaced Mary as the favorite for girls, Mary slipping to fourth in popularity. Mabel, Ann and Emily are on a decline.

These facts are pointed out by Prof. George R. Stewart, Jr., of the English department of the University of California, who has found that the popularity of given names may be plotted in cycles. His data were collected chiefly from records of officers and students at the university.

Predicting what names will be fashionable is difficult, he states, but it is likely that Frances, and such forms of Ann and Emily are destined to grow in popularity until they become too numerous, when they will lose favor again.

Professor Stewart's research will show that 12 conservative names have been used in every generation in the past fifty years. These, in order of popularity in 1925, are: Elizabeth, Mary, Helen, Dorothy, Margaret, Marie, Katherine, Louise, Ruth, Eleanor, Lucille and Evelyn.

Egg Under Tombstone 12 Years Still Fresh

Fayette City, Pa.—Why an egg buried twelve years ago should have remained fresh until it was dug up is the question interesting chemists here.

The egg was unearthed in Mt. Auburn cemetery by Frank Lowers and N. E. Murphy while they were replacing the headstone over the grave of Pierce Kendall. Knowing it must have lain under the headstone since Kendall was buried, twelve years ago, they brought it to this city for examination. Both the yolk and the albumen were fresh.

Bans Sunday Auto Washing

Fall River, Mass.—As a result of the revival of an old blue law, Fall River motorists no longer will be permitted to have their automobiles washed at garages on Sunday. Police Chief Martin Feeney has dusted off the ancient statute and has indicated that it will be enforced even if it becomes necessary to make arrests.

Artnells Spring Surprise On West Shore Nine

The second spell of the Industrial League within a week came Wednesday evening when the Cornell-Artistics sprung a surprise on the West Shore railroaders by trimming them 6-2 in a well-played game at the Artistic Field. "Waxy" Peters had a shutout in his hands until the last inning, but weakened in that frame to permit two runs.

And then but for an error of omission by Eddie Gilday he would have escaped without being scored on. Eddie grabbed a ball hit to Spevack and spoiled chances of a double play, while the next batter struck out.

Ralph Williams, the railroaders' pitcher, was too free with his passes to win. He handed out six, which coupled with eight hits, coming when most needed, caused his downfall.

Spevack, with two doubles, was the leading hitter of the day. Peters, McGuire and Thorne also collected two hits.

The Artnells nicked Williams for a run in the first inning. Brophy walked and Peters and Roosa hit singles to score Brophy.

Walks to Peters and Gilday, Spevack's double and Buchanan's fly sent three more runs across the plate in the third inning. Peters singled in the seventh, stole second and third and scored with Spevack, who was walked and stole second, on Thorne's single.

The railroaders made a strong bid for the game in the last inning. Matheia walked to start the inning and Carpenter singled. Leski hit a grounder between second and short stop and Carpenter was forced out. Matheia taking third, scoring later on a passed ball. Bush then struck out. An error by Buchanan and McGuire's single sent Leski home and then the scoring ceased when Clarke flied out to Spevack.

SIDELINERS.

Roosa, Artnells' second baseman, injured his leg when he slid into second base.

Clarke and Cullum were new faces in the railroaders' lineup.

Spevack, playing short stop, makes a big improvement in the Artnells' infield.

All-Stars Lose To Millbrook

The Kingston All-Stars took their first defeat of the season Fourth of July afternoon at Millbrook, where the team of that place scored a 5-2 victory over Manager McCardle's Kingston boys. Besides being the first loss of the season for the All-Stars, their defeat evened matters between the two teams, who will fight it out on August 11. Foxy Kaman, on the Millbrook mound, held the All-Stars to six hits. Jimmy Volker, twirling for the Kingston team, was touched for 11 safeties. The All-Stars were without the services of Kid Moore and Paul Joyce Thursday.

Evers' Legs Have Slowed Down

YEARS may have slowed up Johnny Evers' baseball ability, but his recent three-day suspension indicated that the Trojan's spirit can become as fidgety as in the days of the old Chicago Cubs under Frank Chance.

What was said by Evers and Umpire Quigley in their argument over the batting order, which resulted in the punishment of the Braves' assistant manager, probably never will be made public. It undoubtedly would show that the former keystone king, as Charlie Murphy used to call Evers, employed the same sort of attack that made him a past master in getting the goats of umpires.

Evers proudly asserts that he never raised a hand to one of the said officials. The nearest he came to it, he said, was in a battle of words with Umpire Finneran. When the decision was about to go against him, he picked up a little dust and let it slide down the umpire's back.

In his palmy days, Johnny had only to make a certain gesture and he was put out of the game. But he had a gesture for each of the umpires and when he made it, it meant more than a mouthful of words.

Whenever he heard a story about a National league umpire he held it in cold storage until an opportune time arose to spring it. One of these incidents involved an umpire who, before his entry as a professional arbiter, was employed by an athletic club as a sort of superintendent of the club property and umpire for its baseball games.

John Evers.

Once when the Cubs were visiting the Polo Grounds, the Giants got a couple of runners on the bases, one being on third, and the Cub infield, as was its practice in such situations, drew in close around the pitcher's box for a quick play that they would pull at the plate.

"The umpire momentarily stopped the game to brush the dust off the home plate, giving Evers the opportunity he had awaited since he heard of the officials former employment.

"Well, I see you're back at the old job, taking care of the grounds," said Evers as the umpire brushed the plate.

The Trojan did not finish that game and was absent from the Cubs' lineup for several days thereafter.

Variations in Sand

The geological survey states that the reason some sand is hard enough for driving and other sand is soft is due to the shape of the grains. Where the grains of sand are rounded, driving is not possible and the sand is soft. At Daytona Beach the sand grains have sharp corners and the sand forms a hard surface for driving.

Two Mound Records Are Held by Pete Alexander

Grover Cleveland Alexander of the St. Louis Cardinals, who started his professional career in 1911 with the Philadelphia Nationals, with whom he played until 1918, pitched sixteen shutouts in 1915, a record that has never been broken. He also hung up a record for games won. That year he won thirty games; in 1916 he raised the ante to thirty-one and in 1917 he topped it with thirty-three.

After having parted with the Philadelphia aggregation Alexander joined the pitching staff of the Chicago Cubs in 1918. Here he pitched for eight years. Every year seemed to improve Big Pete even though he was getting older. In 1926 he signed up with the crack St. Louis Cardinals with whom he came near winning a World's series in 1928. He was one of the good pitchers that the St. Louis crowd depended on to lead them through their fight to the league pennant.

Sidders Meets Kelly In Return Bout Tonigh

Pan-Ams Beat Hercules, 21-14

The Pan-Am Club started early in the holiday game to demonstrate their superiority over the Hercules team and the result was that a ten-run rally by the Powderman in the eighth was not enough to win. The final score was Pan-Ams, 21; Hercules, 14. The winners hit safely 28 times, while the losers collected 15 safeties.

Winkky, Mauer and Becker for the Hercules and Cragan and Black for the Pan-Ams saw mound duty.

Strike-Out Hurler

Forrest C. Twogood, star strike-out pitcher of the University of Iowa, who for the second season in succession has topped the strike-out artists of the big ten conference with a mark of 44. The lanky mound star has been signed by the Rochester team of the International league, and we may soon see him up in the majors.

Niagara Outclassed

The Marquess Islands which lie east of Samoa are rich with natural beauty. There are beautiful bays walled in by lofty cliffs. The slopes are covered with noble growths and the valleys are beautiful in their fertility. On the island of Nuku Hiva there is a stream of water which falls a distance seven times greater than that of Niagara falls.

Tagging Major League Bases

(By William J. Chipman, Associated Press Sports Writer)

If the Pirates nose out the Cubs by a margin of one thin game at the end of the National League pennant race on next October 4, the Fourth of July will go down in Chicago baseball annals as a sort of black Thursday, with the current leadership hanging upon almost every pitched ball. The Bruins entered into an agreement with the Cincinnati Reds to halt the morning game at 12:30 p. m. The Reds won, of course, and the Cubs dropped out of first place as the Pirates swept two more decisions from the crumpling Cardinals.

The Phillies outpunched the Flatbush flock by 14 to 12 in a wild first game yesterday, but the home forces rallied behind the curving of Johnny Morrison to romp off with the second by 5 to 3. It was Morrison's sixth successive victory since his debut as a Robin five weeks ago.

The Giants completed the National program yesterday by dividing a double-header with the Braves, whom they had hoped to defeat twice. The Bostonese snatched the opener by 4 to 3 in a ninth-round rally, but Larry Benton won the nightcap by 8 to 0.

Events in the American League on the holiday moved along pretty much according to schedule. The Athletics defeated the Red Sox by 3 to 1 in the morning and by 8 to 1 in the afternoon. Bob Grove chose the morning engagement for his thirteenth victory.

The Yankees won from Washington by 8 to 4 and 14 to 4 in a double-header, maintaining their position nine and one-half games behind the Mackmen and three points in front of the Browns, who are also nine and one-half contests removed from first place. The Brownies trimmed the Tigers by 12 to 6 and 7 to 6.

The White Sox won the opener from Cleveland by 9 to 2, but the Indians turned the tables in the second game, 12 to 5.

DAIRY

PUT POLISH ON COWS FOR SHOW

Animals Should Be Blanketed and Tied in Cool Barn.

Cattle which are to wear blue ribbons at the county or state fair this fall, should have the fine polish put on their appearance, according to the specialists in dairying and animal husbandry at the Ohio State university.

After the animals to be shown have been selected, the specialists say, they should be tied in a cool, dark barn, and should be blanketed, and that within the next few days, not just a week or so before the fair at which they are to be shown.

Before their blankets are put on, the prize-winners-to-be should have a bath, in water which is not too cold. If they have not shed their long, rough hair, it should be clipped at once, so that their coats will be smooth by fair time.

Their tails, necks and heads should be clipped again about a week before the fair, and their horns polished at the same time. They should be groomed and rubbed down daily.

Animals should be in good flesh to show well. If rapid gains in flesh must be made, a little molasses along with their grain mixture may help. Soaked beet pulp will also help in putting them into condition. Bulky feeds, rather than highly concentrated ones, are better in fitting show animals for the ring.

Every day the animals should be led into the open for a little exercise and to be trained in posing for the judges. "The benefits derived from showing at fairs are not measured by the premium money received, but by the education, acquaintance, and advertising that one gets," say the specialists.

Milk Fever Treatment Given by Nebraska Man

Inflating a cow's udder with sterile air from a regular milk fever outfit when signs of milk fever first appear, and tying the teats with broad tapes just tight enough to retain the air is the most effective treatment known for milk fever, says Dr. L. V. Skidmore, Nebraska College of Agriculture, Lincoln.

Never drench the cow with any liquid or allow the tapes to remain on the teats more than 20 minutes, is a precaution to those administering treatment. The drench may go into the cow's lungs and the tapes may cause the teats to slough off. The theory that some dairymen have tried adding a little molasses to the cow's ration four to six weeks before calving has been found to be effective in some cases in preventing milk fever.

The characteristic position of the cow affected with milk fever is lying down with her feet extended forward under her body and her head turned backward toward her flank. There is generally a crook in the animal's neck resembling the letter S. Later the cow will become unconscious and stretch out full length on her side if she is not properly treated.

HANDLESS WOMAN LOOPS HER PLANE

Stubs Serve as Arms, But She's Expert Pilot.

Los Angeles.—With stubs only six inches long to serve as arms, Miss Josephine Callaghan, twenty-two-year-old wealthy rancher and sportswoman, recently graduated from the "stunt class" at Dycer airport when she piloted her plane alone through all the maneuvers required in the post-graduate division.

Miss Callaghan bought a Lincoln-Page biplane when she was allowed to solo after 30 hours of instruction from Charles F. Dycer, chief pilot for the Dycer School of Commercial Aeronautics.

Instead of the regulation short control stick, Miss Callaghan had the plane equipped with a stick extending shoulder-high. At the top of the stick is a padded forked rod, and in this Miss Callaghan inserts one of her shortened arms.

Because of her height Miss Callaghan also had the pilot's seat raised so that she can see out and had the foot rudder bar moved up and back. Switches and throttle control also have been placed so that she can work them with her fingerless members.

Just before she zoomed her ship through a series of loops, wing overs and spins Dycer took her aloft for her last instructions.

"She tried two loops," Dycer said, "and slipped out of both of them. That often unnerves the average pilot, but Miss Callaghan just nosed the ship over for the third time, gave it the gun and made a perfect loop. She is better than many of the men students I have instructed, having a high degree of persistence, nerve and ability to follow instructions."

"Nothing like it," Miss Callaghan declared. "Why, I can pilot that plane easier than I can drive an automobile and look at the time I save. Also it's the greatest thrill in the world, and I ought to know, because I've been riding my jumpers in horse shows for several years and driven all makes of automobiles."

Miss Callaghan keeps a stable of blue-ribbon winners on her estate at Encino and takes them East each season for competition in shows.

Woman's Two Weddings Just Two Too Many

Oklahoma City, Okla.—A modern version of the tale of Enoch Arden, but without the climax of love and sacrifice, is being re-enacted in court here.

Ella Mae McMullen, who is divorcing one husband because "she already had a husband," seems likely to lose both men. Her other mate, husband No. 1, threatens to sue her also.

Now all she asks is that her five-year-old daughter be returned to her.

Ella Mae married E. W. McGruder, twenty-eight, years ago in Norman, Okla. After being happily married for three years she left him to visit her father. Returning she found her husband had gone to South America. This was in 1920.

He was later reported killed in an airplane crash there. The "widow" married Earl McMullen. Believing her first husband dead, she failed to divorce him.

Recently McGruder, now operating a filling station at the municipal airport here, appeared. Learning of his wife's second husband, he has threatened to sue her for divorce.

Stimulate Milk Flow

When cows are stabled much of the time the udders and rear quarters usually become more or less soiled. This can be prevented in a measure by clipping the long hair around those parts but even then frequent washing is necessary. If the best quality of milk is to be produced the udder should be washed before each milking. One man should go through the barn with a soft cloth and a pail of warm water doing this just before milking is started.

Water Carnival At DeWitt Lake

Eleanor Hardon Wilson Wins Diving Contest and Gives Exhibition—Complete Schedule of Events Next Sunday.

Approximately 1,500 people enjoyed the DeWitt Lake carnival on Thursday, July 4, when a series of athletic events featured the day's program. Several Kingston residents were among the winners. A late start prevented the finishing of the entire program, so several events that did not go on according to schedule will be staged at DeWitt Lake Sunday, starting at 12:30 p. m.

The events and winners were as follows:

Half-mile rowboat race—First heat: John Walsh of Butte, Montana, first place; Fred Zimmer of Poughkeepsie, second. Second heat: George Elmendorf, Kingston, first place; William Jones, Butte, Montana, second.

Half-mile swim—Al Adams, Kingston, first; Charles Bowers, Kingston, second; Fred Zimmer, Poughkeepsie, third.

Girls' 50-yard dash—Gertrude Anderson, Kingston first; Mickey McGlynn, Kingston, second.

Breast stroke, 100 yards—Frank Manesalco, Kingston, first place; Richard Myers, Newburgh, second.

Diving contests—Eleanor Hardon Wilson of New York, formerly of Kingston, first place; G. Kline, Kingston, second; Thomas Carly, Newburgh, third. This feature of the athletic events proved a big hit with spectators who gave Eleanor Hardon Wilson first place winner, such hearty applause that she was obliged to give a diving exhibition following the event. She is well known in this city, especially among members of the Kingston Yacht Club.

The events that did not go on as scheduled and which will take place at DeWitt Lake Sunday at 12:30 p. m. follows: 100-yard free style dash; Back stroke, 100 yards; 50-yard free style for boys under 15 years of age; Breast stroke, 50 yards and the continuation of two additional heats in the half-mile rowboat race.

Celery's Good Qualities

Because of its appetizing flavor and crispness, celery stimulates the appetite. It is rich in mineral salts and vitamines and has, therefore, somewhat of a tonic action. In addition it contains a large amount of cellulose or roughage which makes it valuable as a regulatory food. The actual fuel value of celery is very low, so that it can be freely used by those who are dieting for reducing purposes.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

NEVER TOO LATE

A PROMINENT churchman died in New York a short time ago at the age of sixty-five.

He had risen to bishopric from the position of an obscure rector in fifteen years.

Up to the time he was fifty he had never preached a sermon.

A lot of men think they are past the possibility of progress when they have hit the half-century mark.

We condemn ourselves to old age when we have just begun to know enough to live.

A man of fifty who has lived properly and spent his time usefully and well is just about ready to do something worth while.

Instead of that, however, the most of us celebrate our fiftieth birthday by soliloquizing on the idea that we are over the peak of life's hill, that we have started on the down grade and that from then on the descent will be increasingly rapid.

There is no need of growing old at fifty; of relinquishing interest, cancelling ambition and retiring from effort.

Thousands of men have done the best and greatest work of their lives after the half-century mark was well behind them.

Michael Angelo, the greatest artist, the noblest sculptor, the most inspired architect that ever lived, painted "The Last Judgment," the greatest picture in the world, after he was sixty and designed St. Peter's, the masterpiece of all the earth's architecture, after he was seventy.

Over the device of an old man sitting beside an hour glass, he wrote the inspiring inscription: Ancora imparo ("I am still learning").

Goethe, who finished one of the masterpieces of literature after he was seventy, had as the motto of his last full years, "A man's activity should increase with age." He did not believe in rusting out. He believed in wearing out while doing the best work of his whole career.

Sometime mankind will come to realize that growing old is a useless and needless occupation. That the easy chair in the chimney corner might much better give place to the work table and the continuance of productiveness.

The time will come when men will not grow old at all. When we shall live to a real old age of perhaps a hundred without thinking that we are past our period of usefulness. The best built machine in the world is the human body and if given half a chance it would last far past the three-score and ten that the Psalmist fixed for its survival.

Work seldom kills a man or wears him out.

Thinking, if you except the kind of thinking we call worrying, never made a man old. It is the excesses of life, the intemperances of living that turn us into old men and women and unfit us for further existence.

Live right and you will live long.

Don't grow old before your time. Fifty is no time to begin to feel aged. At seventy-five, perhaps, a man might begin to ease off a little. Man ought not to be less efficient in wearing qualities than his brothers, the animals, and there are plenty of them that live past the century mark without perceptible decrease of activity.

The man that stops at fifty is just a quitter and you don't want to be in that class.

Take a leaf from the book of the bishop and say, "It's never too late to begin."

Can Overdo Exercise

One's health may be affected by overdoing exercise as well as by not exercising sufficiently. In the former case fatigue substances are formed which are not eliminated properly because they accumulate too fast.

Mother's Cook Book

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet ere we part, one lesson I can leave you
For every day:
Be good my dear, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make life, death, and the vast forever
One grand, sweet song.
—Charles Kingsley.

DESSERTS FOR HOT DAYS

FRUIT and fruit juices seem synonymous with coolness in warm weather.

When fruits are combined with frozen or semifrozen desserts, the results are most satisfying. Choose some from the following:

Lemon and Pineapple Sherbet.

Take two cupfuls of sugar and four cupfuls of water, bring to the boiling point with several pieces of thin lemon and orange rind, boil ten minutes. Cool, add three lemons, one orange, one-half cupful of crushed pineapple, after squeezing and straining the juice. Freeze until like frappe, then add an egg white beaten stiffly, finish freezing.

Watermelon Sherbet.

Dissolve one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water, four cupfuls of hot water, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of orange juice. Strain, chill, freeze to a mush and add two cupfuls of watermelon balls and serve, after standing one hour.

Velvet Sherbet.

This is an old favorite and always a treasured recipe when once tried. Take the juice of three lemons and two cupfuls of sugar, add one quart of rich milk, a pinch of salt and freeze. This is delicious served as a sherbet with the main dish or as a dessert.

Banana Fluff.

Put ripe bananas through a ricer, adding a little sugar, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of lemon juice to a cupful of the banana puree. Stir into a half-cupful of whipped cream, serve in tall sherbet glasses and garnish with a maraschino cherry.

BROTHER BILL TOLD HER THAT—

If a gambler will sew a badger's tooth in his left-hand vest pocket, lady luck will be good to him and he will never lose.

Paid Dearly for Defeat

According to a treaty of peace ending the Franco-Prussian war, France was to pay Germany a war indemnity of 5,000,000,000 francs ($1,000,000,000). The last installment was paid September 5, 1873.

Market for Fruits And Vegetables

New York, July 5 (AP).—(State Department of Agriculture and Markets).—Although arrivals of New York upstate green peas were more liberal, prices on fancy offerings were sustained. The demand was good. Wholesale business on Madison county green peas was consummated as high as $4.00 and as low as $2.25 a bushel basket. Most sales were reported at $2.00-$3.50. Erie county consignments brought $2.75-$3.25. Western shipments in bushel hampers sold at $3.00-$3.50.

Hudson valley red raspberries continued in limited receipt. Fancy stock met a prompt outlet, but inferior dragged. Pint baskets peddled out at 15c-30c. New Jersey shipments in similar containers realized 10c-22c.

Increased receipts of state Big Boston lettuce, a large volume of which was leafy or otherwise unattractive, resulted in a wide range in values. Crates of 24 heads from various parts of the state jobbed out as low as 75c and as high as $3.00. The bulk of the sales, however, were reported at $1.50-$2.50. Iceberg lettuce from the west packed in crates of 48 and 60 heads sold at $1.50-$5.50.

The market on red currants was somewhat steadier. The demand was fair and supplies were moderate. Quart baskets sold at 10c-15c.

Orange county Ney York celery was in moderate receipt. The market was without decided change. The demand was moderate. Celery in the rough in two-thirds crates sold at $6.00-$7.00 on the best and $4.00-$5.00 on the fair quality. California celery in standard crates pedled out at $6.00-$9.00 occasionally higher on strictly fancy.

Strawberries were again in moderate supply. Trading was quite active, particularly on good quality berries. The market ruled steady. Most of the wholesale business on Oswego county varieties was at 20c-30c a quart. In a few instances some fancy commanded 35c-45c while some poor worked out as low as 15.

Romaine met a fairly ready sale in a slightly firmer market. Arrivals are gradually increasing. Sales were reported from 75c-$1.50 chiefly $1.00-$1.25, a crate.

Hudson Valley gooseberries continued in light receipt. The demand was moderate. Good quality berries reached 20c a quart.

Calluses and Corns Costly to Americans

Boston.—Corns and calluses cost the country something like $100,000,000 each year in reduced personal efficiency, according to Dr. M. S. Harmolin, president of the National Association of Chiropodists.

"There may be a pair of perfect feet in this nation, but we doubt it," he said. "At least we were unable to find a pair that closely approximated the anatomically normal foot in an exhaustive survey of the nation's feet that included reports of hundreds of public clinics in city and town, kindergarten and college, marts of trade and great industrial plants the country over."

Modern methods of living increased liability to foot ills, he declared.
